FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

The U. S. Air Force*

BY GENERAL NATHAN F. TWining
Vice Chief of Staff, U. S. Air Force

UNDERSTANDING of military aviation is difficult because it is new and revolutionary. But another major cause for confusion in the minds of many is the great amount of propaganda and misinformation that has been circulated over the years on the subject of air power. One reason why you and I, and others who deal with this subject, have to do so much explaining is the fact that so many things have been said about military air power that are not true.

Consider, for example, the very important field of long-range bombing and long-range bombers. No other aspect of military aviation has been attacked and misrepresented so persistently. Since I am sure you share with me the desire and the responsibility to correct errors that may have been planted in the minds of many people on this subject, I want to discuss it with you now.

First of all, let me assure you that the Air Force does not emphasize or specialize in long-range planes to the exclusion or to the neglect in any way of short-range types. Long-range bombers represent only a small percentage of the planes in the Air Force combat arsenal.

Recently I have read some public predictions that we are about to shift from a strategy based on strategic air power to one based on tactical power. Some of these arguments state flatly that the entire military strategy of the United States has been built around strategic bombing. If this is true, or even partially true, then the allocation of our military resources has been out of line with our strategy.

The long-range bombing capability of the United States is contained in the Strategic Air Command of the United States Air Force. The complex new equipment we are now buying for this Command, to replace old World War II equipment made obsolete by jet propulsion, is expensive, of course. But I would like to point out that, exclusive of the cost of this long-delayed modernization, the actual operating expenses of the Strategic Air Command for this fiscal year amount to only one dollar for every 17 dollars that go to other national defense purposes. The operating cost of this Command absorbs only sixteen per cent of total Air Force expenditures for this year, and the Command contains only seventeen per cent of Air Force military personnel. Of all Americans wearing a military uniform at the present time, only one in every 20 is in the Strategic (Please turn to Page 1183)

Benefits for Survivors of Retired Personnel Favored by House Group

A bill to provide a system of benefits for the widows and children of Service personnel who die after their retirement was favorably reported this week by the House Armed Services Committee.

Under the plan, introduced by Representative Cole (R-N. Y.) and favored by the Department of Defense, Service personnel would be offered the opportunity to accept only a portion of their retired pay in return for the establishment of certain annuity plans for their families.

All categories of Service personnel would be eligible to participate, officers, warrant officers, enlisted, etc., and the plan would apply to both regulars and reserve. Participation would be voluntary. Personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and Public Health Service would be eligible.

The amounts to be deducted from retired pay and the monthly pay to be given to survivors are not set forth in the bill but would be based on actuarial tables.

The bill provides that Service personnel may elect "one or more of the following annuities, payable under this Act, in such amount, expressed as a percentage of the reduced amount of his retired pay, as he may specify at the time of election, in amounts equal to one-half, one-quarter or one-eighth of the reduced amount of his retired pay." The annuities offered are:

1. An annuity payable to his widow.
2. An annuity payable to his surviving child or children.
3. An annuity payable to his widow and surviving children.

(In each of the above instances the annuity ceases at specified times—death or remarriage of widow, child reaches 18 years of age, etc.)

4. An annuity payable under the same provisions as above but with the additional provision that no further reductions be made from the retired pay if the beneficiary dies or becomes ineligible before the death of the principal.

Unlike the unsuccessful survivor benefits bill of the previous Congress, this measure has the support of the insurance companies.

Army Lists Promotions, Extends Captain Zone

The Army this week released another increment of promotions to captain (484 names) and also announced specialist corps promotions to captain and major—all published on the back page.

At the same time, it was announced that the zone of consideration for promotion to captain has been extended by six months, from 31 Dec. 1949 to 30 June 1950. As a result, the board considering lieutenants for promotion now is expected to complete its work by mid-June.

The board considering officers for promotion to major is expected to complete its assignment late this week.

The board to recommend majors for promotion to lieutenant colonel will convene at the Pentagon on 9 June.

As for promotions to temporary colonel, officials indicate no prospects for the early convening of a new board. Although some 300 colonels will retire at the end of June, it is not expected that there will be a mass promotion of eligibles to the rank of colonel, although it is likely that the promotions will be somewhat accelerated over the pace of the past months.

Meantime, there are reports that while total manpower is to be reduced, the revised fiscal '54 budget, as sent to Congress, provides what is considered a satisfactory officer grade spread. However, officer promotion prospects for the next fiscal year cannot be forecast until action on the budget is completed on Capitol Hill.

ADM. WM. M. FECHTELER

Chief of Naval Operations, will exchange assignments this summer with Admiral Robert B. Carney, Commander in Chief, Allied Forces, Southern Europe. Admiral Fechteler, it is pertinent to recall in connection with the Survivor Benefits story on this page, has been the leading advocate in the Armed Forces on behalf of survivor welfare legislation.

AF Officer Cut Comes Midst Budget Dispute

In the midst of a Capitol Hill dispute concerning effects of proposed budget cuts on the Air Force (page 1183), major commands of the Air Force this week received an unclassified message from Headquarters (page 1188) which fore-

Deputy SecDef Gives Pay Raise A Boost

Deputy Defense Secretary Roger M. Kyes this week gave a pointed indication of Pentagon support for a military pay raise.

A report that the Defense Department would endorse a cost-of-living pay adjustment for those in Service was first published in THE JOURNAL of 9 May.

Last week, a follow-up story revealed that a pay raise bill, carrying favorable endorsement of the Defense Department, had been sent to the Bureau of the Budget. Pentagon officials declined to confirm the report.

Now, however, comes official evidence of top-level Defense approval of a pay raise adjustment.

In an address delivered 26 May before the Inland Daily Press Association at Chicago, Ill., Mr. Kyes voiced his praise for members of the Armed Forces and urged that the Nation "keep faith with them."

Said Deputy Secretary Kyes:

"It has struck me as rather odd that in all the discussions of national defense there is much talk of planes, ships and tanks, but I have heard little about what I believe to be the most vital element of our national defense. Namely, those fine men and women who have made the military their profession.

"Has anyone told you whether they are being properly paid in relation to people in other activities?" Mr. Kyes asked. "Has anyone told you about some of the inequities in their pension and retirement setup? Are their families properly protected?"

"Because the Secretaries of your Defense Establishment have always felt a deep responsibility to people under their direction, one of the first things we did upon taking office was to ask that a study be made of this whole subject within the military services."

This study is being made by an inter-service committee under the chairmanship of Rear Adm. J. P. Womble, Jr., USN. Admiral Womble was staff director of the Strauss Incentive Pay Commission, whose recommendations included a proposal to tie military pay to the cost-of-living.

Such a proposal is included in legislation sponsored by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.), which THE JOURNAL reported last week was at the Bureau of the Budget following favorable Defense Department reaction.

It may be that Mr. Kyes had received an indication of the Budget Bureau's reaction before delivering his speech at Chicago, in which he said that men and women in uniform "have always done well by us; and they will do well by us in the future."

"So let us keep faith with them and their families."

The War In Korea

Though by no means inactive, ground fighting in Korea was generally light during the early part of the week. The stiffest encounter with the enemy occurred on Saturday when allied troops killed more than 300 Chinese Reds in five pitched battles. The heaviest action was an enemy attack against an outpost of Capitol Hill on the central front where South Koreans fought for more than an hour before beating back the Reds.

Our fighter-bombers were busy in the North as usual, but Sabre jet pilots had a difficult time enticing enemy MIG's across the Yalu. Only twice during the week did the Russian-made jets venture into North Korea. Over the weekend, the Sabres destroyed one Red jet and damaged another. On Tuesday, our Sabres tore into a large formation of enemy jets, shooting down 12 and damaging one other, to bring the total of Red fighters destroyed so far during May to 51. The heavy day's work put the Sabre fliers within striking distance of the record 63 MIG's downed in September, 1952. Maj. James Jabarra, on his second tour of duty, shot down his eighth and ninth MIG. Maj. George Ruddell was credited with his sixth kill and Maj. Jack E. Mass downed two enemy planes, his fourth and fifth jet kill.

While all this was going on, the Navy was busy, too. A task force supported by planes steamed into Wonsan harbor and battered gun positions. The enemy shore batteries fired back, but failed to inflict damage on the U. S. vessels. This latest attack was carried out by the cruisers Bremerton and Manchester and the destroyers Potter and Black. On Monday, the battleship New Jersey boldly dropped anchor in the waters off Chinnampo, port for the North Korean capital of Pyongyang, blazed away with her 16-inch guns. Not a single shore gun replied. Also participating in the bombardment were the U. S. destroyer Chauncey and the British light cruiser Newcastle, and British planes went aloft for air cover.

Speed USAREUR Rotation

USAREUR Headquarters has announced in Heidelberg, Germany, an accelerated rotation scheduled from now to September for military personnel who left the United States between December 1949 and September 1950, and whose overseas tours were involuntarily extended six months last October.

The revised schedule indicated that the Command will be back on a normal 36-month overseas tour about the end of this summer.

RETIREES. M. Sgt. Mervin M. Chamberlain, left, first sergeant and drum major of the U. S. Military Academy Band, and Brig. Gen. John M. Michaelis, Commandant of Cadets, stand at attention as the Corps of Cadets passes in review for Sergeant Chamberlain in honor of his retirement after 30 years service.

In his thirty years as a USMA bandman, Sergeant Chamberlain has attended hundreds of parades and reviews, first as a trumpet player and then as drum major. His familiar figure has led the Band and the Corps of Cadets at parades in New York and in Washington, D. C. Thousands of Army football fans have seen Sergeant Chamberlain lead the Corps of Cadets into Yankee Stadium in New York and the Municipal Stadium in Philadelphia. In addition, Chamberlain has played in and has led dance orchestras at countless cadet "hops."

It is interesting to note that, as drum major of the USMA Band, Sergeant Chamberlain is the last enlisted man in the Army to carry a sword. This tradition will be passed on to his successor.

Sergeant and Mrs. Chamberlain have two sons, Mervin A. Chamberlain, a captain in the United States Air Force in Japan, and Robert L. Chamberlain, a forester in the Hemlock Ranger Station at Carson, Wash.

AF Officer Cut

cast an immediate 5 per cent reduction in officer strength.

Highlighting reaction in Congress to revised fiscal '54 obligational authority budget estimates which cut the Air Force by more than $5 billion was the assertion by Representative Samuel Yorty (D-Calif.), that "the decision to curtail our defense . . . is a reckless course." He said Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson should resign.

An immediate "impact" of the reduced Air Force budget was the disclosure this week that before 31 July each of the major commands is expected to have 5 per cent less officers.

Over-all, the Air Force now has about 130,000 officers.

Commanders were directed to release non-voluntary Reserve Forces officers regardless of length of service performed, with few exceptions.

They were told to accept applications for relief from active duty of Reserve Forces officers who have signed indefinite tour statements.

It is obvious that in the light of this action to reduce the active duty officer strength, the Air Force will be required to modify drastically its previously announced officer recall program and also its program to provide direct appointments.

Additionally, it can be anticipated that the Air Force will liberalize considerably present policies restricting acceptance of resignations from Regular officers.

The Air Force, it is pointed out in the statement inserted in the Congressional Record by Representative Yorty was planning towards a military manpower of 1,061,000 at the end of fiscal '54 and 1,140,000 at the end of fiscal '55.

The figures released by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson show a strength on 30 June 1954 of 960,000 and no increase for fiscal '55.

A considerable stir was created by Mr. Yorty's release of a statement which is said to have come to him through legislative liaison channels, but which was not seen by either Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott or General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff.

At the Pentagon, details of the impact of the budget action still are being held up and most queries are answered with a "no comment."

But as in the case of the message received by major Air Force commands regarding accelerated separation of officers, the necessity of quick action to check the buildup of Air Force strength and reverse the manpower effort must mean early official announcements concerning numerous personnel aspects of the new situation.

Ammo Report Calls For Defense Budget Overhaul

Defense Department officials this week were studying the report of the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Ammunition Shortages which declared that "the budgetary structure of the Department of Defense and the Department of the Army is in an intolerable state."

The report maintained that the Ordnance Department procurement system "indicated unconscionable inefficiency, waste and unbelievable red tape."

The Senate Subcommittee stated that the ammunition shortage had these results:

"1. The mission of the United Nations' forces in Korea was circumscribed.

"2. There was a definite and adverse effect on United States military operations.

"3. There was a needless loss of American lives."

The subcommittee quoted a statement from General Matthew B. Ridgway in which he said that "Whatever may have been the impressions of our operations in Korea to date, artillery has been and remains a great killer of Communists. It remains the great saver of soldiers, American and Allied. There is a direct relation between the piles of shells in the ammunition supply points and the piles of corpses in the graves registration collecting points. The bigger the former, the smaller the latter and vice versa."

On the basis of this statement, the Subcommittee contended that it found it "hard to see" how General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, could maintain, as he did in his testimony, that mothers could be reassured "that their sons are not being needlessly exposed by a lack of ammunition in Korea."

In a minority report, Senator Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) took issue with the charge that lives were lost needlessly and said:

"It would be my judgment that no such statement should be highlighted as a 'conclusion' except on the basis of the most compelling and conclusive testimony to this effect.

"American families which have suffered losses in Korea, have sustained grief enough, without sustaining the added grief which this type of statement brings, when the statement is based, as the committee acknowledges, on conflicting testimony between various Army generals."

The following are the recommendations contained in the majority report, signed by Senators Margaret Chase Smith, Robert C. Hendrickson, John S. Cooper and Harry F. Byrd:

Recommendations

In submitting this interim report of its findings, the subcommittee desires to continue to study the cause and effect of the problem of ammunition shortage, and to look further into our worldwide ammunition position before submitting final and constructive recommendations. In the interim the subcommittee will—

(1) Transmit the entire record of this investigation and the report of same to the Department of Defense and the Department of the Army with a request that they particularize a program or programs designed to correct the conditions described herein and designed to prevent a recurrence of such conditions. The report is also being forwarded to Mr. Bernard Baruch, World War II mobilization adviser; Gen. Brehon Somervell, wartime Chief of the Service of Supply, and Mr. Ferdinand Eberstadt, former Chairman of the Army and Navy Munitions Board and Chairman of the War Production Board, and others who have had broad experience in this field, for constructive recommendations.

(2) Request a monthly report from the Secretary of Defense as to the adequacy of available ammunition supplies until such time as this committee decides that the problem has been resolved, and every 6 months thereafter.

(3) Urge the Senate Armed Services Committee to conduct a specific study of the budgetary and procurement procedures of the Department of Defense and the Departments of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force to ascertain the reasons why the provisions of title IV of the National Security Act are not functioning as intended.

(4) Request the Department of Defense to inventory all plants, determine their productive capacity in event of war, and the time required for war conversion and report their findings to this committee.

(5) Utilize these and other reports secured by this committee in making a final report and recommendations.

Gen. Collins Named To Key NATO Post

General J. Lawton Collins once again is going to succeed General of the Army Omar N. Bradley in a top defense post.

On 16 Aug. 1949, then Army Vice Chief of Staff Collins replaced Chief of Staff Bradley when the latter became Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

On that same date this year, as General Bradley retires and General Collins completes his four-year tour as Army Chief of Staff, General Collins will become U. S. Representative on the Military Committee and Standing Group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

General Bradley has been filling the NATO posts in addition to his duties as JCS Chairman.

President Eisenhower said this week that General Collins would continue to hold four-star rank in his new assignment. It was stated also that he is expected to attend meetings of the JCS when they discuss NATO problems.

General Collins will be succeeded as Army Chief of Staff by General Matthew B. Ridgway, Supreme Allied Commander Europe.

The NATO Military Committee includes representatives from the 14 member countries, while the Standing Group is composed of representatives from the U. S., Great Britain and France.

General Bradley and Mrs. Bradley will represent the Armed Forces of the United States at the Coronation in London. They left for Europe this week. General Bradley will have the rank of Special Ambassador.

President at Pentagon

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson on 27 May tendered a luncheon at the Pentagon in honor of the outgoing and incoming Chiefs of Staff, with the Commander-in-Chief, President Eisenhower, as the guest of honor.

Others who attended the luncheon were Deputy Secretary of Defense Roger M. Kyes, Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens, Navy Secretary Robert B. Anderson and Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott.

The military principals were General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, JCS Chairman, General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations, General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff and their successors, Admiral Arthur W. Radford, General Matthew B. Ridgway, Admiral Robert B. Carney and General Nathan F. Twining.

Other guests were General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Marine Corps Commandant, Vice Chief of Naval Operations Donald B. Duncan, Lt. Gen. Thomas D. White, who will become Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, and Lt. Gen. F. F. Everest, USAF, Director, Joint Staff, JCS. General John E. Hull, Army Chief of Staff, was out of town.

Civilian guests who attended were Assistant Secretaries of Defense W. J. McNeil, John A. Hannah and Frank C. Nash.

Also Mr. Robert LeBaron, liaison officer to the Atomic Energy Commission, Under Secretaries Earl D. Johnson, Charles S. Thomas and James H. Douglas of the Army, Navy and Air Force and Assistant Secretaries of the Army John Slezak and James P. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air John F. Floberg and Assistant Secretaries of the Air Force H. Lee White and Roger Lewis.

Korean Communications Zone

Col. Clyde Massey has assumed the duties of Quartermaster of Headquarters, Korean Communications Zone, replacing Col. Peter Siegel who has left Korea for Japan for reassignment in the Far East Command. Colonel Massey, prior to his assignment to KComZ, was Quartermaster of the 3d Army at Atlanta, Ga.

Air Command.
If the importance of long-range bombardment, or the so-called atomic blitz is to be measured by the percentage of human and material resources devoted to the maintenance and operation of our long-range bombing force, that importance is relatively minor. I agree, with arguments that our strategic bombing capability is an indispensable element of our national military strategy, and with statements that this long-range capability is our principal deterrent and counter-threat against the full use of Communist military power. There are several reasons why this is so but all of these reasons are simple and understandable.

The Soviet Union is not only the biggest nation on earth; it is also the best protected geographically. It has few important targets along its coastline and it is deeply insulated by satellite nations against approach by land. Against air attack it is protected only by distance, but the distances are enormous.

The great concentration of war industry in the Urals is more than a thousand miles inside the nearest Soviet border and well insulated against any land or sea approach. The Soviet heavy weapons center in the vicinity of Lake Baikal lies even deeper.

Obviously, in case Soviet Russia plunges the world into war, we cannot expect to launch our most essential counterattacks from points so near the Iron Curtain that they would be under constant attack by swarms of Soviet jet fighters and light jet bombers. Our strategic bases should be at least several hundred miles outside the Iron Curtain. Consequently, in order to reach the principal targets that would be marked for atomic destruction, our planes must have more than 1500 miles radius of action.

No military airplane has such a range except the land-based heavy or medium bomber—in the United States forces only the B-29, the B-50, the B-47, the B-36, and the B-52. As a matter of fact, most of the bases which could be well defended against air attack in all-out war are more than 1500 miles from the nearest of the principal target areas in the Soviet Union.

It is important to understand these facts because there have been many confusing statements about the possibility of delivering atomic bombs by fighter planes or other small airplanes. We have many fighter planes in the Air Force that can carry small atomic bombs and they will play a major role in any atomic war, but they have many deficiencies when compared to the long-range bomber. Their combat operations are much more dependent upon favorable weather conditions, they can not carry the most efficient and powerful types of bombs, and they simply could not reach most of the targets vital to the Soviet war machine.

Since refueling over enemy territory would be most difficult, the radius of action of fighters and light bombers is insufficient for really deep penetrations against an enemy whose great geographical advantage is the depth of his territory. Only the long-range bomber can reach all the targets which would have to be reached at the very outset of a total war. Coordinated and repeated attacks by large numbers of such bombers might be necessary to overwhelm Soviet defenses and strike the blows that would destroy Soviet ability to continue a war against us.

Smaller Planes

These are some of the reasons why we need more and better bombers of this type and why smaller planes, despite their great usefulness and our great need for them, are not a substitute. Smaller planes could be helpful against airfields, bridges, vehicles, and other targets near the Iron Curtain. But such strikes would assist us principally in holding and delaying actions. Our hope of overwhelming the enemy before his atomic attacks overwhelm us would depend principally upon the ability of our long-range bombers to reach and destroy the bases and the sources of weapons launched against us.

Although range is the basic requirement in aircraft to accomplish this purpose, they must also have ability to penetrate air defenses that are improving all the time. The high speed of jet bombers greatly increases ability to penetrate with minimum losses. Medium and heavy jet bombers can carry electronic gear for finding and hitting targets at night and in bad weather as well as electronic countermeasures for use against enemy radar, antiaircraft, and missiles.

There can be little doubt of our ability to penetrate the most elaborate and expensive air defense system that it now appears possible to devise for so huge an area as Soviet Russia, provided we have sufficient high performance planes and highly skilled crews. Nor can there be any doubt that the already large atomic stockpile of the United States could destroy the installations and facilities vital to the Soviet war machine. We must face the fact that the growing Soviet atomic stockpile, may soon be sufficient to cripple American industry if the new Soviet long-range air force can deliver it against the most important targets over here.

Air Defense System

Our improving air defense system and civil defense preparations are essential to reduce the effects of the initial blows if the Soviets should decide to gamble on an atomic war. But we would have to depend heavily upon prompt and rapid delivery of our own bombs against enemy bases to stop such attacks. And, of course, our ability to strike back in this manner is our most persuasive argument against an all-out Soviet attack.

Ammunition is effective only to the extent that it can be placed on targets. Atomic weapons are most effective when they can be delivered against the targets that count most. Our ability to deliver our bombs against these targets very rapidly must be insured.

The Air Force is striving to insure this ability by building a complete system of air weapons that takes full advantage of the capabilities of all types of planes. In addition to fighters designed primarily for air combat, it has fighter bombers capable of delivering atomic and conventional bombs from forward bases. It has medium bombers capable of delivering all types of atomic and conventional bombs from forward bases, or by staging through forward bases, or by aerial refueling from intermediate bases. It has heavy bombers capable of delivering all types of atomic and conventional bombs from bases in this hemisphere.

High Level Bombing

Many false statements have been made concerning the difficulties of high level bombing. High level bombing has sometimes been referred to disparagingly as "mass bombing" or as "area bombing" in supposed contrast to bombing from intermediate or lower levels. The truth is that the difference in accuracy of bombing from different levels is small. In Korea at the present time, radar-controlled bombing from an altitude of several miles is generally more accurate than dive bombing in daylight. Our B-29 crews in Korea are bombing by radar along the southern banks of the Yalu night after night. Last week a procession of B-29's bombed steadily for half an hour against a target just five miles from the Yalu and in plain view of the principal Communist MiG bases on the other side of the river.

Although several Communist planes were sighted and there was considerable antiaircraft fire, none of our bombers were hit. This kind of thing has been going on for some time and our loss rate for medium bombers is less than that for fighter bombers operating at low altitudes in daylight. Although these medium bombers account for less than five per cent of all our sorties, they have dropped more than 25% of the total tonnage of bombs dropped by the Air Force in Korea.

This has been called a tactical rather than a strategic war. Nevertheless, medium bombers have proved invaluable, not only for night radar bombing against bridges and other small targets, as well as air fields, but also for many night close-support missions within a few hundred feet of our front lines, for reconnaissance missions night and day, for

Text of Report Relating Impact of New Budget On Air Force Program Plans

THE following is the complete text of a statement inserted in the Congressional Record by Representative Samuel W. Yorty (D-Calif.), relating to the effect of the revised budget on Air Force programs.

"As a result of the first atomic explosion in the fall of 1950 and the increasing capability of the Soviet long-range Air Force, a new basic policy for national security was established in the spring of 1951. In the fall of 1951 the Air Force asked for a strength of 155 wings plus supporting elements in order to support the basic national security policy.

"The Joint Chiefs of Staff and the President approved a strength of 143 wings, including 126 combat wings and 17 troop carrier wings. This strength, which was originally to have been achieved by 1954, was 'stretched out' under the President's budget to the end of Fiscal Year 1955. The Air Force supported this budget as providing a level of forces which represented the absolute minimum in order to attain adequate national security in view of the military strength of the Soviet Union.

Limitations Listed

"The revised budget for the Air Force for Fiscal Year 1954 limits the Air Force program in three ways: manpower limitation, limitations on new obligational authority, and limitations on expenditures for Fiscal Year 1954.

"The Air Force's original calculations called for a manpower strength of 1,700,000 in order to achieve a strength of 143 wings. By exercising the most rigid manpower economy through such methods as cutting down on our provisions for reserve crews to take care of combat attrition, the Air Force arrived at a new personnel strength of 1,210,000 required for the 143-wing force. This represented an increase in military personnel of only 14% from the previously authorized strength of 1,061,000 for the 95-wing force. This program was later revised to provide for the actual build-up in Air Force manpower strength as follows:

End FY 53	End FY 54	End FY 55	End FY 56
Wings
106	133	143	143
Manpower
1,016,800	1,061,000	1,140,000	1,155,000

AF Strength Told

"The Air Force now has a strength of 106 wings with about 980,000 military personnel. Secretary Wilson announced that the Air Force's personnel strength on 30 June 1954 would be limited to 960,000 and that it would be further limited to 915,000 on 30 June 1955. Since that time the limitation for 30 June 1955 has been raised to 960,000. To reduce from the end Fiscal Year 1953 position of about 980,000 to an end Fiscal Year 1954 position of 960,000 without exceeding a man year average limitation of 970,000 will be difficult, if not impossible. Large numbers of ROTC graduates must be called early in the Fiscal Year and estimated personnel losses are low during this period. It is not possible to raise and lower personnel intakes at will, nor to accommodate them efficiently in a training system which is geared to a reasonably constant flow. No specific manpower limitation has been announced beyond the end of Fiscal Year 1955. However, if a strength of 965,000 is not available at the end of Fiscal Year 1956, the Air Force cannot man 120 wings.

Revised Budget

"Under the revised budget for Fiscal Year 1954, the Air Force is limited to appropriations of $11,688,000,000. This represents a decrease of $5,090,000,000 from the figure of $16,778,000,000 contained in the printed budget for Fiscal Year 1954. The bulk of this decrease is to be felt in two categories. The new budget calls for a reduction in appropriations for aircraft and related procurements of $3,169,000,000 (from $6,664,000,000 to $3,495,000,000). It also calls for a reduction in maintenance and operation appropriations of $1,925,000,000 (from $4,235,000,000 to $2,310,000,000). The new budget calls for the activation and equipment of 110 wings by 30 June 1954 (instead of 133). It calls for 115 wings by the end of Fiscal Year 1955 (instead of 143 wings). It calls for 120 wings by the end of Fiscal Year 1956 (instead of 143). As previously indicated, the Air Force will not be able to man these 120 wings, however, unless a strength of 965,000 military personnel are available at that time.

"In addition to the reduction of 23 wings, it will be necessary to eliminate from the flying support units of the Air Force 4 wings, 11 groups, 47 squadrons, and 2 flights. Included in this reduction are such units as MATS squadrons, Air Reserve squadrons, air reconnaissance groups, assault wings, and liaison squadrons. Also eliminated are 89 non-flying logistical support units. In addition to these reductions of major forces and supporting units, the manpower limitations make it necessary to reduce further manning standards in all elements of the Air Force, except the combat groups.

Delay Or Cancel

"The new budget limits Air Force expenditures for Fiscal Year 1954 to $15.1 billion.

Dependent Care Hearing Scheduled For 15 June

The Defense Department Care Commission, following a second session of hearings this week, scheduled another meeting for 15 June—possibly its last.

Under the chairmanship of Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president emeritus of the Brookings Institution, the Commission now has heard testimony from the Services, and from veterans organization leaders and spokesmen for the medical and dental professions.

On the basis of this testimony, the Commission will make recommendations concerning medical and dental care for families of Service personnel. Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has asked the group to recommend a long-range dependent care program.

At the Pentagon hearing on 25 May, testimony was given by representatives of the American Medical, Dental and Hospital Associations, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Military Order of World Wars.

Military personnel who testified included Vice Adm. J. L. Holloway, USN, Chief, Bureau of Naval Personnel, and Rear Adm. Joseph V. Ackerman, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service, Chief Medical Officer for the Coast Guard. Admiral Ackerman was accompanied by Comdr. T. J. LeBlanc, USCG, his assistant.

Maj. Gen. Melvin J. Maas, USMC-Ret., commander-in-chief of the Military Order of World Wars, appeared on behalf of his organization to urge adequate medical care for Service families.

In addition to Dr. Moulton the Commission members are Thomas L. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Company of America; Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, president of Rutgers University; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, noted student and writer on social problems; and Dr. George W. Bachman, senior staff member in charge of health studies for the Brookings Institution.

This limitation on Fiscal Year 1954 expenditures can be achieved only by delaying or cancelling equipment contracted for with Fiscal Year 1953 and prior year funds. The limitations will make necessary some reductions in equipping standards even in the reduced force. Fiscal Year 1954 obligational authority will provide equipment which will be received primarily in Fiscal Year 1956. However, the reduction in Aircraft and Related Procurement funds will affect not only FY 56 deliveries but FY 54 and FY 55 as well. To offset the drastic impact of the cut in these funds from $6,664 million to $3,495 million, aircraft already programmed for deliveries in FY 54 and FY 55 using prior year funds must be re-programmed for delivery in FY 56, in order to preserve reorder lead time and maintain a going aircraft industry. Unless this impact is spread over the three-year term there is a marked danger that large segments of the aircraft industry would be cut so sharply that they could not adequately respond to later aircraft orders.

Airframe Reduction

"In terms of airframe weight, the proposed budget cut would reduce FY54 deliveries about 7%: FY 55, 19%; and FY 56, 19%.

"The reduction in 'Major Procurement other than Aircraft' funds from $900 million to $625 million, and Construction funds from $700 million to $400 million will be felt principally in FY 55 and FY 56; to the extent that reprogramming will be required in these two areas to adjust to the lower force levels, the effect will be felt in FY 54 as well.

"It is impossible to measure the full impact of these limitations because the Air Force has been given no specific information on new obligational authority or estimated expenditures for Fiscal Year's 1955 and 1956."

Largest Pre-Flight Class Ends

Some 600 aviation cadets, the largest number to finish pre-flight training at Lackland AFB since WW II, were graduated 22 May. The graduation talk was given by Brig. Gen. Wycliffe E. Steele, USAF base commanding general.

Army's New Cannon Fires World's First Atomic Shell

The first atomic shell to be fired from a gun was exploded 25 May at the Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada Proving Ground.

The shell, ejected from the muzzle of one of the Army's 85-ton 280-mm cannons, was sent seven miles through the air before it was exploded by a time fuse 500 feet over a target area dotted with trees, railroad engines, freight cars and military equipment.

There was no official announcement of the explosive power of the shell, but it was indicated to be half the strength of the atomic bomb exploded over Hiroshima, which was equivalent to 20,000 tons of TNT.

Test Hailed A Success

The success of the test was immediately hailed by Congressional and government leaders who attended the firing as the beginning of a new era in artillery warfare. The test was the tenth and last in the AEC's spring test series.

The projectile, 11 inches in diameter, was touched off electrically by remote control as some 2500 troops and 575 participating observers from the Armed Services watched from trenches two and a half miles from the burst area. Congressmen and government officials stood on a knoll nine miles from the test range.

The huge gun from which the shell was fired was one of two brought by the Army from the Field Artillery center at Ft. Sill, Okla. The guns are 45 feet long and were transported cross country on dual tractor-trailers. The shell itself probably weighed about half a ton, as contrasted with the 800 pounds weight of the gun's conventional shells.

A nine-man crew from the Field Artillery Group at Ft. Sill, under the direction of Col. De Vere Armstrong and Capt. Richard A. Erickson, battery commander, loaded the gun. Then the crew moved back an undisclosed distance and the device was set off by electrical impulses.

UNITED STATES ARMY

The members of the crew, whose identities were kept secret, crouched in trenches at a safe distance from the gun in case the big artillery shell should jam and explode in the gun.

Despite reports to the contrary, assurance has been given that the big gun can cross any bridge built by the Army. In fact, its individual tractors exert only 45 ton pressure, while Army bridges all support the 60 ton tank. Likewise, most highway bridges are capable of sustaining the weight of the gun as it is transported.

Army Sec'y. With Troops

The 100 members of Congress and government officials who watched the test included Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense; Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Chairman-designate of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Thomas E. Murray, Commissioner of the AEC, and Representative Sterling Cole, Chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Commission. Robert T. Stevens, Secretary of the Army, also witnessed the explosion, but with the troops in the forward trenches.

Secretary Wilson described the test as "interesting" and added he was "pleased" with its success. Admiral Radford hailed the explosion as "a milestone in the history of atomic weapons." Representative Cole declared that the test marked the addition of "another major weapon to our atomic stockpile."

"I want to take my hat off to the scientists and engineers in the atomic energy program who spent so many hours and weeks of labor devising this marvelous new gadget, and to the military men to support and assist them," Representative Cole said.

Gen. Grow To Speak

Officers of the District of Columbia Armor Association will hear an address on mobile warfare by Maj. Gen. Robert W. Grow, wartime commander of the 6th Armored Division, at a meeting 4 June at the Naval Gun Factory. A second speaker from the Armored School, Ft. Knox, Ky., has been tentatively arranged.

Further details can be obtained by contacting Lt. Col. George M. Seignious or Capt. C. R. McFadden. Their telephone numbers, respectively, are EX 5-3704 and JA 7-9400.

5th Army Finance Officer

Col. William C. Howell, jr., formerly commanding officer of the Army Finance regional office at Chicago, has assumed duties as Finance Officer for Fifth Army, also in Chicago. He succeeds Col. Roy W. Bartlett, now a member of the U. S. Military Advisory Group in Athens, Greece.

Colonel Howell has been in active Army service for 12 years. He was chief of the Army Audit Agency in the European Command from 1947 to 1949. Other assignments since included those of Comptroller, European Command, and Finance Officer of Fourth Army, at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

Shift 7 Generals

Routine changes in assignment affecting seven Army general officers were announced 25 May by Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens.

The changes are expected to take place generally in July and August.

Brig. Gen. John J. Binns, Comptroller of the U. S. European Command, has been named Assistant Division Commander of the 5th Armored (Training) Division at Camp Chaffee, Ark.

Brig. Gen. William S. Biddle, Director of the Military Assistance Division of the U. S. European Command, has been designated Assistant Division Commander of the 3d Armored (Training) Division, Ft. Knox, Ky.

Brig. Gen. Robert J. Wood, CG of the 53d Antiaircraft Artillery Brigade at Swarthmore, Pa., has been assigned to the U. S. Army Forces, Far East.

Brig. Gen. James G. Devine, CG of the 40th Antiaircraft Artillery Brigade in the Far East Command and Antiaircraft Officer of the U. S. Army Forces, Far East, has been temporarily assigned to the Personnel Center at Camp Stoneham, Calif., pending further assignment.

Brig. Gen. William H. Colbern, Artillery Commander of the IX Corps in Korea, whose assignment to the Inter-American Defense Board was recently announced, instead will command Ft. Lewis, Wash.

Brig. Gen. James H. Phillips, Deputy Army Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, for Intelligence, has been given a new assignment with the U. S. Army, Europe. He will be succeeded by Brig. Gen. Mark McClure, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, for Intelligence, of the U. S. Army, Europe.

Bust of President

Is Presented To USMA

A bronze bust of President Eisenhower, sculptured in 1948 by the late Jo Davidson, was presented to the U. S. Military Academy this week by a New York art lover, George Sands. The only other casting of the bust, also owned by Mr. Sands, will be given to the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst, England.

President Eisenhower did not attend the ceremonies, but his daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Eisenhower, unveiled the bust for its first public showing.

Col. Herman Beukema, a 1915 classmate of the President and Professor of Social Sciences at the Military Academy, delivered a brief address after the presentation by Mr. Sands.

DSM For Gen. Smythe

Maj. Gen. George W. Smythe, USA, former commander of the 3d U. S. Infantry Division in Korea, has received the Distinguished Service Medal for his work in Korea.

He was presented the award in ceremonies at the Far East Command in Tokyo, prior to his departure to assume duties in the Office of the Chief of Staff in Washington, D. C.

Navy Unveils Flight Safety Developments

The Navy has disclosed three new developments in the flight safety equipment field which "greatly increase pilot safety, comfort and efficiency." They include an integrated flight suit, a new type "thin-back" parachute and an ejection seat mated to the other two developments.

Adaptation of the integrated suit to the new seat is based on combined Douglas Aircraft Co. and Navy research and development. For fast ejections, it incorporates a single-point release mechanism which automatically releases shoulder straps, seat belt, anti-G hook-in and cuts off the regular oxygen supply.

All were shown to members of the Aviation Writer's Association during their annual convention last week in Dallas, Tex.

The new integrated suit consists of a lightweight flight suit which incorporates anti-G equipment, parachute harness, lap belt and shoulder straps. By uniting this equipment and designing it as a single unit, the Navy said "literally pounds of gear and much bulky discomfort have been subtracted from the aviation safety equipment worn by a modern combat pilot."

The thin-back parachute, developed by the Switlik Parachute Co., is opened and closed with a chain fastener arrangement (similar to a zipper) in lieu of the familiar cone and pin. The release mechanism, designed by Talon, Inc., operates much like a zipper does when its lower fastener comes loose. The opening is aided by spring tension on the fastener. Over 1,000 successful jumps have been made with the new chute by the Navy Parachute Unit at El Centro, Calif.

The Navy said the new pack is only one-third as thick as the present chute, requires only one man for packing, thereby cutting packing time in half, is much more comfortable and is 12 pounds lighter than the present standard chute.

Extra Pay For Medics

The bill providing for the continuation of the draft for doctors, dentists and allied specialists was reported favorably by the Senate Armed Services Committee this week. The Committee adopted an amendment to the House bill to assure continuation of the $100 additional pay to volunteers, including veterinarians.

Other amendments adopted by the Senate Committee included: Senator Johnson's (D-Tex.) amendment calling for including in those affected by the bill certain doctors, dentists and allied specialists who were in the Panama Canal Health Service between 16 Sept. 1940 and 2 Sept. 1945; and an amendment suggested jointly by Senators Flanders (R-Vt.) and Kennedy (D-Mass.) providing a sliding scale of service for those who had already had certain periods of service.

A camera so fast that it can be synchronized to the firing mechanism of jet combat planes has been delivered to the Air Force by the Bolsey Corporation of America to record "kills" and provide visual evidence of actual battle for the instruction and training of jet pilots. It was shown at the Aviation Writers Association convention in Ft. Worth, Tex.

Known as the Bolsey N-9, the new camera is remote-controlled and shoots pictures automatically when the guns start firing, recording not only the actual shooting but also the results, as the picture-taking continues after the firing ceases. The N-9's picture record leaves no doubt as to the number of enemy planes shot down or damage done to targets on the ground.

Wins Guggenheim Grant

Lt. Col. Robert R. Ellis, staff officer of The Engineer School, U. S. Army, Ft. Belvoir, Va., has been awarded a $3,250 Guggenheim Fellowship to study the history of the Confederate State's Corps of Engineers.

During the next 12 months covered by the grant, Colonel Ellis will study the organization, activities and leadership of the Engineer Corps of the Confederate States. He has already explored the subject in a series of articles which helped him earn the fellowship. Additional research and writing will expand and augment the earlier study into a comprehensive historical reconstruction, which will be published when completed.

Col. Ellis entered the Army in 1940 as a private in the Texas National Guard. He received his commission in 1940, and was made Lt. Colonel in 1945.

Transfer Two B.G.'s

Orders were issued this week assigning Brig. Gen. Charles H. Royce, assistant commander of the 1st Infantry Division in Germany, to be assistant commander of the 7th Armored Training Division at Camp Roberts, Calif., and Brig. Gen. Charles F. Craig, CG of Camp Kilmer, N. J., to duty in USAREUR. The changes will be made effective this summer.

Navy Selects Warrants; Forty-one In Grade W-4

The Navy this week announced the selection of 2,507 warrant officers and commissioned warrant officers for promotion to new pay grades. The group includes temporary commissioned officers of the Regular Navy who hold permanent warrant officer commissions.

Thirty-eight officers of the Regular Navy who are now serving as Ensigns or above, but who hold permanent CWO grades of W-3, were recommended for promotion to W-4.

Forty-nine temporary officers who hold permanent CWO grades of W-2 were recommended for promotion to W-3.

Three CWOs of the Regular Navy and Naval Reserve on active duty in the grade of W-3 were selected for promotion to W-4.

1,250 CWOs of the Regular Navy and Naval Reserve on active duty in pay grade W-2 were recommended for promotion to W-3.

779 WOs of the Regular Navy and Naval Reserve on active duty in pay grade W-1 were recommended for promotion to CWO, pay grade W-2.

In the inactive Reserve 36 WOs were recommended for promotion to CWO, W-2; 348 CWOs in pay grade W-2 were selected for W-3, and four CWOs in pay grade W-3 were selected for W-4.

The Navy said promotions will be made in increments according to seniority and as vacancies occur. They will be announced later.

Active duty officers (both Regular and Reserve) who were selected for pay grade W-4 are:

Sen. Saltonstall To Address USNA Grads

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.), Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, will deliver the graduation address at the U. S. Naval Academy.

"June Week," the final week of the Academy's academic year, begins today with the famed "Ring Dance" and will end on Friday 5 June with the graduation exercises at which Senator Saltonstall will speak.

Between the two events, the Academy will hold four full-dress parades, special religious services, band concerts, hops for the upper classmen, and award-presentation ceremonies.

Graduation exercises for the 924 midshipmen of the Class of 1953, the second largest graduating class in the history of the Academy, will be held in Dahlgren Hall at 11:00 a.m. on 5 June.

On Saturday, 6 June, the new First and Third Class midshipmen will begin embarkation for the summer practice cruise to east coast South American ports.

Convert Big Carrier

The 27,000-ton aircraft carrier USS Bon Homme Richard has entered the San Francisco Naval Shipyard to undergo modernization.

The program of modernizing the flat-top will be the largest single ship building job ever assigned to the shipyard. It is scheduled to last approximately 30 months and will cost $62,000,000.

The Navy said that the carrier will be equipped with a new angled deck similar to that recently installed aboard the USS Antietam.

Request Legislation

For General Erskine

The Defense Department has asked for special legislation to permit the retirement of Lt. Gen. Graves B. Erskine, USMC, and to provide for his employment in a civilian capacity in the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

In an article last week, THE JOURNAL disclosed that General Erskine was expected to be named to an important psychological warfare post. The Defense Department said this week, "Due to General Erskine's outstanding qualifications, the Secretary of Defense desires to appoint him, in a civilian capacity, as head of the Office of Psychological Policy."

The Defense Department has pointed out that two obstacles stand in the way of the appointment. These are the provisions of the Van Zandt amendment (which prevent an officer from receiving retired pay unless retired for physical disability, age, hardship or best interests of the service), and the Act of 31 July 1894, which requires special authorization for a retired officer to hold a civilian position if he is receiving retired pay amounting to $2500 or more a year.

The proposed legislation, which has been approved by the Bureau of the Budget, provides that General Erskine, while serving in the psychological warfare job, "shall receive the pay of the civilian position in lieu of retired pay, without prejudice to his status as a retired officer."

Army Navy Air Force Journal 1187
30 May 1953

General Erskine will be promoted to four-star rank upon retirement.

Navy Drs. Are Lawyers

Two Naval medical officers received Bachelor of Law degrees this week in commencement exercises at George Washington University.

They are Lt. Comdr. Edwin C. Sweeney, MC, attached to the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery in Washington, D. C., and Comdr. Byron David Casteel, MC, a Korean veteran.

Already the dawn of a new world is with us. At The Glenn L. Martin Company, for instance, new aircraft, guided missiles and electronic weapons are being designed not as today's flying vehicles but as coordinated and controlled spaceborne systems of tomorrow.

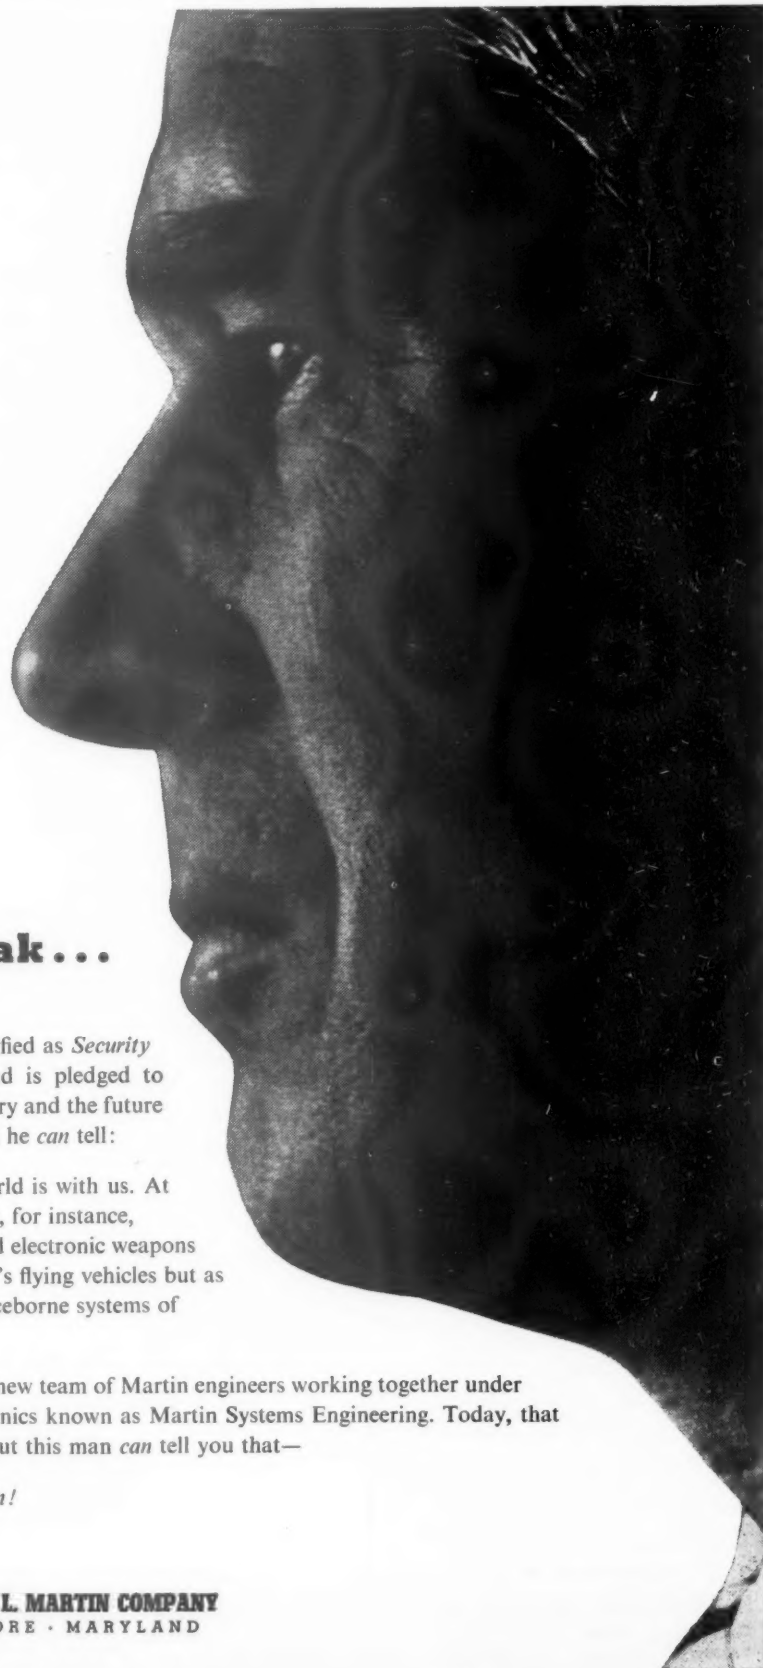

Behind that work is a powerful new team of Martin engineers working together under an entirely new concept of avionics known as Martin Systems Engineering. Today, that story is under security wraps, but this man can tell you that—

Jet Aces Return

Captains Joseph McConnell, jr. and Manuel J. Fernandez, the nation's leading jet aces, returned home this week, still protesting because they were pulled out of combat duty for assignments in the United States as instructors.

In Washington, they had a brief chat with their Commander in Chief, President Eisenhower, at the White House. Captain Fernandez was reunited with his father, Col. Manuel J. Fernandez, who is stationed with the 18th Air Force, Donaldson AFB, S. C.

Captain Fernandez, who shot down 14 MiG's in 125 missions, and Captain McConnell, who became the first triple jet ace by downing 16 enemy jets in 106 missions, both expressed a desire to return to Korea to complete 150 sorties.

Pilots normally are rotated back to the United States after 100 missions. Captains Fernandez and McConnell applied for additional missions. They were refused because the Air Force felt their experience was too valuable to risk in further combat.

Gen. Carpenter Appeals For More Letters O'Seas

An appeal for a letter-writing campaign to sustain the morale of Service personnel overseas was made yesterday by Maj. Gen. Charles I. Carpenter, Chief of Chaplains of the Air Force and Chairman of the Armed Forces Chaplains Board.

The appeal was made in an address prepared for delivery 29 May at the 30th Annual Convention of the American Air-mail Society at Dayton, Ohio. The convention was held in conjunction with the Post Office Department's plans to issue a new commemorative stamp honoring 50 years of aviation progress, which is one of the major events in the year-long celebration marking the Golden Jubilee of Aviation.

General Carpenter's subject was "Air-mail and Battlefront Morale." Having just returned from a visit to the Korean front, he emphasized the obligation of the people back home to bolster the morale of those overseas by writing more letters.

The Ladies Auxilliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars is preparing to follow up General Carpenter's appeal by launching a campaign for more letters to Service personnel abroad.

New AF ECI Courses

The USAF Extension Course Institute at Gunter AFB, Ala., is now offering courses in Basic Munitions and Military Affairs. The first volume of each course is now available to ECI students.

Basic Munitions is a four-volume course for airmen covering identification, inspection, storage, transportation and loading of ammunition, aircraft bombs and rockets and chemical agents.

Military Affairs is designed to give background information essential to a comprehensive understanding of the legal problems of the Air Force.

Aerial Port School Plans Third Course At Donaldson

The new aerial port operations school at Donaldson AFB, S. C., has trained more than 120 men as dropmasters, loadmasters and parachute riggers since the first of the year.

Two six-week courses were held during the past few months, and a third is planned for the near future.

The students, all enlisted men except three officers who completed the last course, have been assigned to the Donaldson unit and the newly organized Second Aerial Port Operations Squadron, Sewart AFB, Tenn. The graduates have been placed on flying status and will perform duty during aerial drops and airlifts performed by TAC's Eighteenth AF.

Studies in the loadmaster phase of the course include the dimensions of a troop-carrier aircraft's compartments and doors, floor composition, the number of tie-down rings and the tensile strength of the floor and tie-down rings.

The students learn how dropmasters rig all vehicles and weapons, capable of being dropped from a plane, onto various types of platforms used in aerial port operations, and deliver them by parachute during flight.

In the parachute rigging phase of the course, training is given in inspecting, packing and making minor repairs on all cargo canopies, and in packing the extraction and pilot parachutes.

U of Md. Professor Named I & E Chief For AF

Dr. Joseph M. Ray will become the first civilian chief of the Air Force Information and Education Branch, Personnel Services Division, at Air Force Headquarters on 1 June. He succeeds Lt. Col. J. M. Barber, with whom he served as assistant chief for a year.

As chief of the Information and Education Branch, Dr. Ray will supervise three sections: the Education Section, which includes off-duty education at all levels and handles "Operation Bootstrap," a program enabling members of the Air Force to work toward diplomas and degrees; the Information Section, which establishes policies for newspaper, radio, and other information media used in the Air Force; and the Dependent Schools Section.

Col. Bramlitt To USAFE

Col. Charles H. Bramlitt, commanding officer of the 3510 Medical Group at Randolph AFB, Tex., for the past three years, has been assigned to Europe. He will be replaced in his former duties by Col. Carl B. Stilson.

Under Colonel Bramlitt's direction, the Randolph Hospital has developed from a five-doctor, dispensary-type unit to a thriving medical and surgical center. The entire hospital has been renovated, three new wards opened, the surgical pavilions remodeled and acoustic plaster placed throughout the hospital.

Alaska Air Guard Sqdn.

Ready For Recognition

The 144th Fighter-Bomber Squadron, Alaska Air National Guard, is ready to meet requirements for Federal recognition. Maj. Gen. Earl T. Ricks, Acting Chief, National Guard Bureau has announced.

Youngest tactical unit in the Air National Guard, the Alaska unit, which is based at Anchorage, was authorized to organize last summer with 1 July 1953 set as the limiting date for meeting minimum requirements for Federal recognition as part of the National Guard of the United States. Alaska Air Guard headquarters are located at the Territorial Capital in Juneau.

Unit To Be Inspected

The unit will be inspected by the Air Force before 1 July for activation on that date.

A Staff visit by the Air Force Division, National Guard Bureau, recently returned from Alaska, reported that the 144th F-B Squadron "more than meets" requirements for Federal recognition.

Support given the unit by the Alaska Air Command was credited in major part for the progress made since organization began last year.

"Alaska Air Guard officials and the National Guard Bureau attribute the progress made by the Alaska Guard in great part to the fine support given them by the Alaska Air Command," said General Ricks. "The Alaska Air Guard is organized to play an important role in the aerial defense of the strategic Northernmost frontier area."

Basic Tactical Structure

Activation of the Alaska squadron and supporting units will round out the basic tactical structure of the Air National Guard. The 85 squadron ANG network covers every State, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and Alaska.

The Alaska unit is assigned Fighter type aircraft and supporting cargo and trainer craft. A planned construction program at Anchorage's International Airport will provide hangar and warehouse facilities, motor maintenance and other buildings required by the unit.

"The enthusiastic support of the people of Alaska for both the Alaska Air Guard and Army Guard assures the greatest possible development and utilization of these organizations in the proper defense of this strategic area," said General Ricks.

Maj. Schilling, Surg. Dept. Chief Is Col.'s Brother

Maj. John A. Schilling, who entered the service less than two months ago, has completed a medical indoctrination course and been appointed head of the Department of Surgery at the USAF School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex.

Major Schilling took his medical degree at Harvard University, and was assistant professor at the University of Rochester before entering the Air Force.

He is the brother of Col. David C. Schilling, commander of the 31st Fighter Escort Wing at Turner AFB, Ga., who distinguished himself three years ago by piloting the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic in a jet fighter.

Col. Osborne To Greenland

Col. Thomas F. Osborne, formerly assigned to Maxwell AFB, Ala., has been named executive officer and deputy base commander of Narsarsuaq AB, Greenland.

Colonel Osborne's overseas service includes a two-year tour of duty with the 5th Air Force in the Southwest Pacific from 1945 to 1947.

RAF Officers To TAC

Two Royal Air Force officers have been assigned to the Tactical Air Command staff, Langley AFB, Va.

They are Wing Comdr. William Pitt-Brown, who has been named to the TAC directorate of doctrine staff, and WRAF Flight Officer Marion Tudor, who has been appointed chief of the TAC officers school branch of military personnel.

leaflet drops, and for many other purposes. Despite the fact that many of them fly from bases beyond the range of the growing number of Communist jet bombers in Manchuria, they can operate, ton-for-ton, as economically as the smaller types.

Versatility

Now I do not mean to imply that the medium bomber or the heavy bomber can substitute for the light bomber or the fighter bomber in every case. I want only to emphasize the fact that the long-range bomber is entirely capable of performing many short-range tasks and of performing them very well from any altitude that may be considered desirable. On the other hand, no short-range tactical airplane can carry out the long-range missions of which the strategic bomber is capable.

These terms "tactical" and "strategic" are not exclusive. Air power is indivisible; it would be foolish to seal it up in packages to be allocated for various purposes. There are no compartments in the atmosphere nor any fences or boundaries that prevent the swift concentration of air power for any purpose that a unified command considers most important.

The principal limitation of air power is range, and it is for this reason that the first nation to produce atomic powered bombers in quantity will have a tremendous advantage.

Bases

In the meantime, we have, in addition to the problem of improving range and speed of penetration, the problem of providing bases that are relatively secure against attack. At the present time the principal threat to bases is air attack but in a few years the increasing threat of enemy submarines will make those bases near the sea so vulnerable to attack from the sea that we will have to take that problem into consideration also.

The more fighter planes we have, the more we can put on forward bases to fight for air superiority. But when Communist short-range planes so greatly outnumber ours, we must, of course, depend more heavily on long-range planes that can be kept beyond the reach of most of them. The Soviet air force, like our own, consists principally of short-range planes. Their more numerous bases and their greater number of such planes will force us to depend more heavily on our medium and heavy bombers that can strike from beyond their reach.

At the present time most of our medium bomb units are equipped with old piston-powered B-29's from World War II, or with the B-50, which is an improved version of the B-29. These planes are still dependable and very effective, as I have pointed out. But the Soviets have many thousands of jet fighters and many hundreds of light jet bombers. They are manufacturing both on a large scale and they are improving their models constantly.

Medium Bombers

This means that both their offensive and defensive capabilities are increasing, and that our own aircraft must be improved as rapidly as possible. This is a slow process, but we are now beginning to get the first increases in combat capability from medium bomber orders placed several years ago.

The first medium jet bomber to go into our combat units is the B-47, and this plane is proving itself an excellent investment. A 12,000 mile flight by one of these planes, refueled in the air, has recently been announced. B-47's have already flown around the North Pole and have flown directly across the Atlantic from bases in this country in less than six hours.

I am happy now to be able to announce that the 306th Medium Bombardment Wing, which was the first operational unit to be equipped with B-47's, will leave MacDill Field, Florida, early in June for a 90 day period of training in the United Kingdom. Upon completion of this normal rotational training duty, this unit will return to the United States. Operational training at overseas bases is a part of the Air Force's established program for maintaining the global mobility of the Strategic Air Command.

The quality and performance of our planes and crews will be our principal dependence in air warfare for a long time to come. As more B-47's become available they are being integrated into other units of the Strategic Air Command. The continuation of this process over the next few years will give us a striking force of medium bombers capable of penetrating improved air defenses.

The B-47's now beginning to move into our world-wide operations, together with the B-52's that we hope soon to produce, are becoming more important to our hopes for peace or, if necessary, for ultimate victory.

Honor Gen. Ellsworth

Renaming of Rapid City AFB, S. D., in honor of the late Brig. Gen. Richard E. Ellsworth, killed in a B-36 crash near St. Johns, Newfoundland, on 18 March 1953, has been approved by General Nathan F. Twining, Acting Chief of Staff.

General Ellsworth was in command of the 28th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing at Rapid City at the time of his death, when he was returning from a training mission to England.

Dedication ceremonies will be held at Rapid City this month.

Col. Oartel, Dental Chief

Col. John S. Oartel has been named director of the Dental Division at Walter Reed Army Medical Center's Army Medical Service Graduate School. He was formerly assistant director of the division.

Lt. Col. Russell W. Sumnicht has been named deputy director of the Dental Division in addition to his present assignment as coordinator of the division's post-graduate instruction.

CAP Maps Plans For Summer Camps at AF Bases

Some 7000 Civil Air Patrol cadets ranging from 15 through 19 will spend nine-day camping periods at Air Force installations throughout the nation during the summer months.

The first encampment is scheduled to begin at Turner AFB, Ga., on 6 June, and the last nine-day period will end 6 September at MacDill AFB, Fla.

The encampments will "afford the finest opportunities for cadets to assimilate the atmosphere of an energetic aviation operation center, and at the same time reap the benefits of profitable vocational and academic training," Maj. Gen. Lucas V. Beau, CAP National Commander, said.

The cadets will get a full sampling of Air Force routine. They will be housed in military quarters, eat in Air Force dining halls, participate in military athletic and recreational activities, and gain a general working knowledge of the operation of a modern military installation.

Under the supervision of adult CAP members, the cadets will tour base facilities and examine the courses and equipment peculiar to the specialized training conducted by the host base. In addition, members will inspect other important career fields such as fire fighting, photography, communications and aircraft safety.

Most bases will provide orientation flights in AF planes and schedule other special activities for the visiting cadets.

"These men and women (of the Armed Services) have always done well by us; and they will do well by us in the future. So let us keep faith with them and their families."—ROGER M. KYES, DEPUTY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE.

"The Most Vital Element." Because recognition of a problem is the essential first step toward its solution, the Armed Forces should be particularly heartened by Deputy Secretary of Defense Roger M. Kyes' remarks this week concerning Service pay, pensions, retirement rights, and survivor benefits. Mr. Kyes characterized the "fine men and women who have made the military their profession" as "the most vital element of our National Defense."

The Deputy Defense Secretary asked the members of the Inland Daily Press Association, whom he was addressing in Chicago, these pertinent questions about Service personnel:

"Has anyone told you whether they are being properly paid in relation to people in other activities?"

"Has anyone told you about some of the inequities in their pension and retirement setup?"

"Are their families properly protected?"

Of course, those members of the Association who read the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL (and many of them do) know the answers to these questions through our constant emphasis on the shabby treatment accorded Service personnel in recent years. In fact, THE JOURNAL has been gratified at the number of metropolitan newspapers which have reprinted the facts and figures brought out in our articles bearing on pay, loss of career attractiveness, survivor benefits, etc.

Secretary Kyes' rhetorical questions about those in Service and his conclusion, "Let us keep faith with them and their families," serves to give emphasis and impetus to the thinking of influential citizens along these vital lines. The studies directed by President Eisenhower, Secretary of Defense Wilson, and Deputy Secretary Kyes will bring out the seriousness of the situation and its effect not only on the individuals but on the efficiency of National Defense as well.

The more widespread the recognition of the situation becomes, the better will grow the chances of positive, corrective action.

The Key to Progress. The new budget cut in funds for research and development for the Armed Forces is a source of considerable apprehension. The new request asks for a 16 per cent over-all reduction in funds for this purpose.

Scientific research and the development of ideas gained thereby is the major course of progress in the advancement of our ability to defend ourselves. Its effects range from such powerful aircraft as the B-47 jet bombers which already have flown across the Atlantic Ocean, the Navy's highly efficient submarine detection and destruction devices, and the Army's atomic artillery, to better rifles and personal equipment to make fighting men more efficient. It was Germany's vast stockpile of scientific data, resulting from years of sustained research, that raised her capabilities far beyond what should have been expected from her size and natural resources.

The 280mm cannon which this week so successfully fired the first atomic shell in history is an excellent example. In fact, the huge artillery piece, with its great range and accuracy, represented years of preparation even before its atomic capability was added to it. It may be recalled that it was nearly ready for production when other research came up with the atomic shell. Through the courage and foresightedness of General J. Lawton Collins, production was held up on the new weapon while changes were made in the design and manufacturing techniques which added to it its present atomic capabilities. Thus, but for the research and development program we would not have been able to have now the world's most powerful ground weapon. Yet, the Army is the greatest sufferer under the current cut, 22 per cent reduction having been made in its funds.

In lean years as well as in times when there are overall cuts in Service funds, as there are now, it is most important that the stockpiling of ideas be stepped up, rather than reduced, so that we will have this cushion against the time when a speedy expansion in advanced weapons may be required.

Survivor Benefits. The limited plan of survivor benefits reported out this week by the House Committee on Armed Services is a step in the right direction, and should be enacted. But a great deal more would still remain to be done to establish a genuinely effective system of survivor benefits.

The one reported out by the Committee is only a segment of what should be an overall comprehensive plan. It has the merit, from a Congressional viewpoint, of costing the government nothing. It is confined solely to an offer to Service personnel to accept a reduced retirement pay so that their widows and children may have a continuing small income if they survive. Of course, the Service man himself pays the cost of his survivors' incomes by electing to forfeit a portion of the retired pay he has earned. It fills a dire need and doubtless would be accepted by the majority if it were enacted.

We hope that the hearings on this bill, and the discussion that will follow when it comes up on the floor, will stimulate the interest of members of Congress in the broad subject of survivor benefits and lead them to demand that it be put on an adequate and equitable basis.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

The Navy Department released this week an account of its early development of the marvelous radar device which detects the approach of enemy airplanes or surface vessels. In addition to being used on board ships and at Army and Navy shore installations, it is now proposed that all Navy airplanes be so equipped.

50 Years Ago—

The immediate establishment of a naval coaling station at Dutch Harbor, Alaska, has been approved. The availability and strategic importance of Dutch Harbor as a site for a coaling station have long been appreciated by Navy officers. It is located on one of the Aleutian Islands, on the direct commercial route between the ports of Behring Sea and Southern Alaska and the Pacific coast of the United States.

85 Years Ago—

The cable announces that Prussia has at last led off in the great scheme of disarmament, orders having been issued for a reduction in the landwehr. It is hard to say how much stress is to be given to this dispatch. This much, perhaps, we can admit, that Prussia has begun to disarm a small part of her troops. Whether Napoleon will follow with the demobilization of a part of the National Guard is an entirely different matter. The enormous establishments of modern times are terrible burdens to national treasuries. France and Prussia have been draining their resources and the coffers of all their neighbors, who are forced to guard against their menacing demonstrations.

Military Careers

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The Colonel's letter published in ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL of 16 May 1953 certainly presented several pertinent points which should be considered in the investigation of decreased attractiveness of military careers as directed by President Eisenhower; however, I believe that the following might be set up as a prologue to his detailed examples: Undoubtedly, those personnel charged with the investigation of decreased attractiveness of military careers will give much thought to certain basic considerations before getting into the details in their study.

Perhaps they will consider that even Officers in the military strive to be average Americans and should have the right to expect at least about the same from life as a bricklayer, or a plumber or someone else in an average occupation.

This expectancy can be easily summed up as pride of occupation, reasonable security for his family, freedom, a modest home or place of abode of equivalent standard of the average American family, and the complete support of supervisors with suitable reward for demonstrated performance.

Are the above simple standards an adequate description of an Officer's career at present? My answer is definitely "No."

I believe that the most descriptive adjectives relative to a military career are "uncertainty" and "insecurity." If these could be eliminated, then a military career would be attractive and would keep the highest type individuals, for all other things being equal, the military does have an advantage over any other career for some people are patriotic and want to serve their country. However, this feeling can be outweighed by the tremendous disadvantages presently existent in the military structure.

Give Up Rights

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

My congratulations on the printing of a letter that pin points the grievances of many Regular Service officers. I refer to the text of what was evidently a Regular Service resignation printed in your issue of 16 May.

It seems a shame that the acceptance of a Regular commission forces a man down a one-way road of "involuntary servitude" and requires him to give up many of the rights of citizenship. I myself have served eight years and have had my resignation thrice refused. When does the Government keep a contract?

CAPTAIN, INFANTRY

Support The Services

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It is gratifying to see the interest with which the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL is following developments in the military pay field. I believe that your efforts are at least partially responsible for the changing attitude of the new Defense officials, just as your past articles on career degradations probably helped to motivate the current study to determine ways of making military careers more attractive.

As long as we have a "Spokesman for the Services" whose voice is widely respected as yours, we can be assured that our problems will get proper attention in both Congressional and Defense echelons. Please accept my thanks.

Army Official's Remarks "Challenging"

A Leading Capitol Hill Military Expert Takes Note of Speech by Army Asst. Sec'y. Mitchell Which Calls Service Attractiveness a 'Basic Problem, One Whose Importance Cannot Be Overstated.'

THE efforts of Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens and his top associates to bring to public attention the problem of decreased prestige and benefits of military service are gaining notable success and should offer strong encouragement not only to the Army, but to all members of the Armed Forces. Closely related to an impromptu address delivered by Mr. Stevens early this month at Milledgeville, Ga. (front Page, THE JOURNAL 16 May) is the speech—text herewith—delivered on 14 May by Assistant Army Secretary James P. Mitchell before the Military Order of the World Wars in Washington, D. C.

Asst. Sec. Mitchell

Mr. Stevens, it is pertinent to note, spoke at a celebration in the home city of Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), ranking minority member of the House Armed Services Committee. Mr. Mitchell's address has been inserted in the Congressional Record by Representative Dewey Short (R-M.), the Committee Chairman. On Capitol Hill, no two legislators in the Republican and Democratic parties could be more influential in assisting military leaders in advancing Service Attractiveness than Mr. Short and Mr. Vinson.

Representative Short says Assistant Secretary Mitchell's speech is "Challenging." He says it should "not only interest the leadership in our Army but in all branches of our Armed Services and all our citizens throughout the nation."

The remarks by the Army's manpower specialist show that in the relatively short time he has held office Mr. Mitchell has gained a detailed insight into the problem of attracting and retaining outstanding personnel for the Armed Forces.

Recognized as one of the Nation's outstanding manpower authorities—during WW II he supervised the largest civilian working force in the nation's history—Mr. Mitchell's remarks, like those of Secretary Stevens, can be expected to have important influence, in and out of the Pentagon. That Representative Short inserted the text of the address in the Congressional Record is seen as extremely significant, particularly in view of the current inquiries relating to Service attractiveness.

Text

The following is the complete text of Mr. Mitchell's speech, as submitted for consideration of Members of Congress by Chairman Short:

As experienced members of the military, you are fully aware of what good military leadership can do for national defense. No business—especially that of national defense—is better than its leaders. A capable defense command requires the highest military competency; under civilian leadership, such competence is this country's prime asset in the race for national security and survival.

I am happy to say, as a newcomer to the Army secretariat, that I have been most impressed with the caliber of the officers I have met in the Pentagon; they show the characteristics of capable commanders and able administrators, with whom any American concern would be proud to do business. It is reassuring to me, as I know it is to you, to find that our Army personnel system has been able, through the years, to develop the great majority of these leaders from within its own ranks. I am enthusiastic about this—not just for today—but for the future, because good leadership tends to perpetuate itself. If we have good leaders today, they will help develop the leaders of tomorrow. All the personnel policy in the world will not in itself create success. It is the leader in the line who must develop teamwork, loyalty, and effectiveness. It is the sergeants and lieutenants in the field who must prime, discipline, and develop combat strength for the future. To have real doubt of the overall ability of our commissioned and noncommissioned officers to train potential leaders should and would lead us to despair for the future. We must give these young leaders faith and, as a proof of confidence, we must do all in our power to back them up to the hilt with practical manpower and personnel policy.

Future Leadership

With these thoughts in mind, I would like to discuss briefly with you the problems of leadership for the future in our Army. Is there a problem, what are its causes, and what can we do to solve it?

First, let me state that there very definitely is a problem. You men who have spent a considerable portion of your lives in the Services know that this is true. The Rockefeller Commission, in its recent report to the President, stated that "the problem of attracting and holding career personnel needs restudy and prompt action." President Eisenhower, in his message to Congress concerning the reorganization of the Defense Department, stated that he had requested the Secretary of Defense to investigate and make recommendations to him concerning the problems of attracting and holding the type of career personnel who in the Armed Services are indispensable to the security of this Nation.

Having come very recently back to the Army, it was somewhat of a shock to me to have had this problem pointed out in the form of very striking statistics. Let me cite you a few. The Regular Army had estimated a reenlistment rate of about 40 per cent for fiscal year 1953. However, at the present time, this rate is only 20 per cent. Thirteen per cent of the present freshman class at West Point have resigned this year. In our sister Service, the Navy, only 85 out of a total of 800 Holloway plan graduates applied for Regular commissions. The percentage of ROTC honor graduates accepting Regular commissions has dropped drastically in the last few years.

Situation "Alarming"

These are alarming figures. If a similar situation was discovered in a company, the business administration would have good cause to be distressed. Because, in the Army, as in private business, the needs of the future are not met by the leaders of today, we must be concerned with providing conditions today which will produce for us in the future the leaders we will need in whatever may be the task then before us. Wise, experienced administrators and leaders come into being only through long years of experience in a particular field. By such experience the professional profits in judgment and maintains continuity. He trains those to follow him. He supports those who, by greater experience or ability, are senior to him.

Now leadership in the Army is not quite the same problem as it is in the commercial world. Only the Army produces combat leaders. In the world of my experience, top executive jobs are transferable. If my former business or any business needs a personnel manager, advertising executive, a production man, an engineer, that particular skill which has been created in various industries can be bought on the labor market. It has a price tag. It is generally available. But this same possibility does not apply to leadership in combat. The ready supply of leaders in warfare must be created and maintained within the military force itself. There is no other source. Believe me, during a future emergency the Nation will not find a trained airborne commander in Montgomery Ward, nor will it find an experienced artilleryman in the Ford Motor Co. Because of this essential difference between the Army's personnel procurement problem and that of industry, our planning and procurement of our leaders must be made far enough in advance so as to insure that the future will never find us short of those we need. We must attract and hold our career personnel.

Causes of Problem

What then has caused this problem? What are its elements? What can we do to influence its solution?

Before I detail my way of looking at the problem, let me express my firm belief that the overriding consideration to morale in the Active and the Regular Army is the esteem with which the American people holds the Service. We have gone far beyond the stage where the Army can be considered a body separate from that of the Nation.

The American citizenry from all cities and villages, from all walks of life, from all colors, races, and creeds, bring into being in an emergency the forces in the numbers that we will need. Thus, it is of the highest importance that we look upon our Army. (Please turn to Page 1206)

USSR Unhappy Over Bermuda Conference

IT is not surprising that the Russian government has expressed its displeasure over the scheduled Big Three meeting in Bermuda in late June. This conference of the chiefs of state of Britain, France, and America has been devised by President Eisenhower as a necessary step toward reconciling present differences among the three western powers in advance of the possible later meeting with Russia making a fourth. Moscow's purpose now as always is to increase such differences as exist and provide new ones wherever possible. Malenkov's new government last month seemed to be playing in excellent luck, not only through mounting exacerbation of Allied feelings in the Far East (both in Korea and Indo-China) but through the unscheduled and foolish whoopings of a fortnight ago in the House of Commons and the United States Senate. It has been a bad season for that sort of thing, and the effect on mutual security aid may be extremely bad for the western alliance, despite the sober warnings lately sounded before Congressional committees by General Ridgway and other authorities.

HOWEVER, as repeatedly in the past, the opportunity which seemed to be in Moscow's grasp—to exploit differences among the Allies—was tossed away by Moscow itself. The issue was a clear one: the West had listened attentively to President Eisenhower's thesis that Russia could prove peaceable intentions by deeds rather than by words, and that the first place to prove it was by granting Austria the fully deserved peace treaty. (There have been 260 conferences on that theme thus far, thanks to Russia's evasions.) Instead of agreeing to proceed with treaty-making, or even prolonging by diplomatic chatter the period of doubt, Moscow summarily refused to resume the negotiations. Thereby, it would seem, Moscow threw away recklessly her best chance to prove her good intentions, to disprove the Eisenhower skepticism, to support the Churchill overtures, and to deepen the cleavage among the Allies. It will take Moscow a long time to regain the advantage which was in her grasp, and to fool certain important Western statesmen again.

IT IS ABOUT TIME something pleasant happened in Europe too, as any Frenchman will agree, for as this is written France is as far from having a government as it was when M. Mayer was defeated and when both Gaullist and Socialist aspirants were discouraged from attempting to form one. The meeting in Bermuda has two seats reserved, for Sir Winston Churchill and for President Eisenhower, but the occupant of the third seat has not announced his name. Presumably France will name a prime minister by mid-June, and keep him in office long enough to let him stay through the Bermuda meeting, but it would be helpful if he could be assured a still longer unbroken career in office.

NEW CNO. Recently selected for U. S. Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Robert B. Carney, receives congratulations in Naples from Maj. Gen. Clovis E. Byers (right) his Chief of Staff at Headquarters Allied Forces Southern Europe. Admiral Carney has been the Commander of the Southern European NATO forces for nearly two years.

IN THIS EMBARRASSING MOMENT France has rather boldly suggested a considerable addition to earlier requests for American aid in airplane supply. The purpose is to produce 2,300 French planes rather than the scheduled 1,500, and that is surely a noble concept. But the means appears to involve additional American financing to the extent of $1.3 billions, and there will be more than one view of that, especially at a time when both American and French budgets are facing a cut.

THE WASHINGTON VISIT of Admiral Robert B. Carney, for inspection by Congressional committee holding his nomination as Chief of Naval Operations, is welcome on many counts. There is no doubt about his confirmation, but the committee inquiry will permit an opportunity for some useful discussion of an area upon which many in America are not well enough informed—namely, southern Europe and the Mediterranean, and the great importance of this Southern Sector of the European Supreme Command. Nobody can discuss this more knowingly than Admiral Carney, fresh from almost a year's service in that Sector and from continuing contacts with civil and military authorities all the way from France to Turkey. Much of his testimony will become public, in most timely fashion.

IN THE PHILIPPINES, last Sunday's Liberal party's national convention, at which Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo (lately ambassador to the United States) had hoped to win the presidential nomination, proved to be so completely in the hands of President Elpidio Quirino's supporters that the Romulo delegates walked out; they had demanded a secret nomination ballot and been denied it. The immediate result was the Liberal party's renomination of Mr. Quirino. The next result was the announcement that General Romulo's supporters will organize a third party (probably the Democrats) and nominate their leader. Prediction is that this defection will cut severely into the Liberal strength, to the advantage of Ramon Magsaysay's Nationalist candidacy, which from the outset has been recognized as a thriving prospect for the November elections. Mr. Magsaysay is well remembered for his service as Defense Minister in greatly reducing the extent and bitterness of the Huk rebellion by removing some of its major causes. General Romulo up to the time of his resignation as ambassador was the Philippines' permanent delegate to the United Nations. President Quirino, if elected, will be able to serve but two of the four years under the constitutional prohibition of holding office continuously for more than eight years. The vice-presidential nominee (who if elected would then succeed) is the wealthy Jose Yulo whom President Quirino forced to resign as Senate President in 1950.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

B.O.B. Confirms Pay Study—A Bureau of the Budget spokesman this week gave official confirmation to the report that its fiscal experts are studying H. R. 1437, which would tie military pay to the Cost-of-Living Index. As THE JOURNAL went to press, the B.O.B. had not yet completed its analysis of the pay raise proposal.

The Defense Department sent the measure to the Bureau on or about 14 May.

At the Pentagon, officials have declined repeatedly to confirm the report that the Defense Department has recommended a pay raise for military personnel to the Bureau of the Budget. But the B.O.B. now says for the record that the matter is under study.

Air University Chief Continues Fight—Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, who while serving as Air Force DC/S, Personnel, was a leading spokesman against unwarranted attacks on Service personnel, is continuing to state the need for increasing the attractiveness of military careers in his new post as CG of the Air University at Maxwell AFB, Ala.

General Kuter has declared that "When unjustified and unfair allegations of waste and mismanagement are played up day after day after day, confidence in American military leadership is undermined, the appeal of military service is eroded, and the stature of a career as a public servant in uniform is destroyed."

In an Armed Forces Day address at Montgomery, Ala., General Kuter said: "While the morale and fighting spirit of our Armed Forces has not yet yielded to this threat, danger signs have appeared. Within the past few months, for the first time in the history of American military aviation, regular commissions as second lieutenants in the U. S. Air Force have gone begging. Properly qualified young college men are turning down a career as a public servant in uniform."

General Kuter has been given a key responsibility by Air Force commanders to encourage outstanding young men, particularly college students, to seek a lifetime career in the Air Force. It can be expected on the basis of his activities as DC/S, Personnel, and his recent Armed Forces Day address at Montgomery that he will continue to press for action which will bring increased prestige to Air Force officers and airmen.

General Hodge To Retire—The Chief of Army Field Forces, General John R. Hodge, who will be 60 years of age on 12 June, and who has over 35 years' service and 5 years in the permanent grade of major general, will be retired at the end of June. President Eisenhower this week asked the Senate to confirm his promotion to the grade of general on the retired list.

At the same time, the President nominated Lt. Gen. Doyle O. Hickey, USA, to be a lieutenant general on the retired list. He has reached the statutory retirement age of 62.

In connection with General Hodge's retirement two years in advance of his attainment of the statutory age, it is recalled that the President has called upon the Defense Department to reexamine provisions of law—in this case the Officer Personnel Act of 1947—which "force the early retirement of unusually capable officers who are willing to continue on active service."

As far as can be learned, no concrete recommendations to amend present retirement legislation have yet been made.

No successor has yet been named to be Chief of Field Forces following General Hodge's retirement. There is speculation that this post may go to General John E. Hull, Army Vice Chief of Staff, although there is also a good possibility that the Army will want to assign this post an officer who has seen combat service in Korea.

Although General Matthew B. Ridgway does not take over as Army Chief of Staff until August, there is no doubt that his recommendation concerning a successor to General Hodge will be extremely important.

Navy Faces Fight—The Navy League of the United States expressed concern this week that "the Navy will have a real fight on its hands to convince Congress of the need for the third carrier of the Forrestal class."

The League notes that "Some Congressional leaders are not happy about the President's budget and the statement of Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey that the national debt limit of $275 billion may have to be increased to accommodate a prospective deficit of some $10 billion in the coming 1954 fiscal year, beginning July 1." The carrier, the League adds, "approximating $220 million is a conspicuous target of the economy bloc in Congress and of certain columnists and aviation zealots who heretofore have waged a relentless vendetta against naval aviation."

In its official publication, "Now Hear This!", the League says, however, that "the news as it concerns the Navy is mostly good," including the selection of Admiral Radford to head the Joint Chiefs, the Moulton commission to study medical and dental care for dependents, and the Womble committee which is studying ways of making service careers more attractive.

The League President, Frank Hecht, has written to Dr. Harold G. Moulton "recommending that no reductions be made in presently authorized hospital and medical care for dependents of naval personnel."

Still No AF Academy Hearings—As THE JOURNAL went to press, The House Armed Services Committee had yet to schedule hearings on a bill to authorize an Air Force Academy.

The project has the "enthusiastic approval" of President Eisenhower and Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

With an adjournment target only two months away, Congress will have to speed consideration of the AF Academy measure if it is to pass this session.

As was reported in last week's issue, Air Force leaders are hopeful that the Academy will be authorized before the retirement of General Hoyt S. Vandenberg on 30 June. He has been a leading advocate of a third Service Academy.

Historic Spot For White House Steel—The steel which once supported the White House roof will be used in the construction of a bridge spanning Dogue Creek connecting Ft. Belvoir, Va., and Mt. Vernon. Tests on the metal to determine its strength and usefulness are being conducted at The Engineer School, Ft. Belvoir.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...There's reason to believe that if the Armed Services Committee does not recommend new controls on TEMPORARY OFFICER PROMOTIONS Representative Davis again will sponsor a rider to the Appropriations Bill. This action, however, would be STRONGLY OPPOSED by Armed Services Committee members, who don't want any more legislation by rider.

...A decision is expected shortly regarding ARMY ENGINEERS on duty with the AF. The top civilian officials of the Defense Dept. are considering a proposal to transfer SCARWAF (Special Category Army With Air Force) personnel to the AF, which then would have responsibility for supplying replacements. It's estimated that 10,000 ARMY TRAINING SPACES are required for this purpose. Some officials feel that Congress would object to any action which would appear to establish a SEPARATE ENGR. CORPS for the Air Force. It's a controversial issue with varying viewpoints on both intra- and inter-service levels.

...The Services are disturbed over the IM-PENDING LOSS on 30 June of authority to recall personnel involuntarily except for special cases, such as doctors. A bill to extend PRESIDENTIAL RECALL POWER beyond the end of the current fiscal year is in the Bureau of the Budget. Its chances of passage: Slim.

...The Army's plan to eliminate the EISENHOWER JACKET and to substitute for issue a new-type garb with dark green coat and pink type trousers, is said to have gained ENTHUSIASTIC APPROVAL by leading members of the House, but some opposition is reported in the Senate. Quarter-master uniform experts point out that an EARLY DECISION is desired, since uniform stocks now are low. It is estimated that 18 months is required between the time a new uniform is approved until its initial issue to troops.

...The tone of Deputy SecDef. Kyes' speech this week (first page) doubtless will mean quick deactivation of the HANDFUL CLUB, understandably established after his earlier address of 27 April which asserted that the Defense Dept. had only a "handful of men" with abilities, knowledge and experience up to the task of sound and adequate management. Naturally, EVERYONE elected himself to the club.

...Some members of the APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEES are irked over Pentagon delay in sending to Capitol Hill recommendations relating to T/O&E modifications designed to save manpower. A rider to the '53 funds bill called for the report. Its preparation is a SPECIAL PROJECT. The Congressmen had hoped the report would be available to aid them in considering the fiscal '54 budget.

...Legislation resulting from the sweeping inquiry being made by the Committee on RETIREMENT POLICY for Federal Personnel—members of the Armed Services will be included—is not expected to reach Capitol Hill until 1955. Already, it is forecast that the recommendations will be "HIGHLY CONTROVERSIAL."

...Less Bureau of the Budget control over SERVICE LEGISLATION was indicated during recent hearings on Capitol Hill. Chairman Dewey Short of the Armed Services Committee charged that the BOB has been "Legislating too long, in my opinion." His remark was greeted by a chorus of "amens" from Committee members.

Are you overseas or,
are you going overseas?

Do you want automobile insurance that will cover in Japan and Western Europe, in Puerto Rico and in the Philippines, as well as in the States? We do not insure "everywhere" but we do follow our policyholders to many parts of the world—and what's more we have claims facilities in out-of-the-way places.

Write and tell us where you are or where you expect to go and we will tell you what we can do about your automobile insurance.

MRS. Charles E. Wilson, wife of the Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Robert T. Stevens, wife of the Secretary of the Army, were honored guests at a formal tea given by the Officers' Wives Club of the Finance Corps in the Washington, D. C. area. The tea was held at the Officers' Club, Ft. Myer, Va., on 21 May.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Stevens were Mrs. Bickford E. Sawyer and Mrs. W. T. Campbell. The guests of honor were presented orchid corsages.

Mrs. John C. Lackas was chairman assisted by Mrs. Clayton F. Fowler, Mrs. Alexander Halber, Mrs. Raymond E. Graham, Mrs. Robert G. Davis, Mrs. John F. Whitton, Mrs. L. E. Hannah, Mrs. C. A. McIntosh, Jr., Mrs. John L. Clancy, Mrs. Thomas C. Grissom and Mrs. Victor E. Bess.

The next meeting of the club will be a dessert-bridge at the Army and Navy Country Club on 18 June with Mrs. W. C. Thompson as chairman. Telephone North 7-6775 for reservations.

Hosts to Gen. & Mrs. Ridgway—

The Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins honored General Matthew B. Ridgway, who has been named by the President to succeed General Collins as Army Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Ridgway, upon their recent arrival from Europe, at a dinner, at the Collins' quarters at Ft. Lesley J. McNair.

The guest list included Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens, the Ambassador from Denmark and Mdm. Henrik de Kauffmann, Mrs. Ridgway's sister, Mrs. Lucy Kalbach, the Air Force Chief HONORARY LL.D.—Lt. Gen. and Mrs. Franklin A. Hart pictured at their Pearl Harbor quarters before departing for the mainland. The General, commanding Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, is en route to Washington and will attend commencement ceremonies 3 June at his alma mater, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala., to receive the honorary Doctor of Laws degree, the 28th conferred by the institution. The 27th LL.D. went to General H. M. ("Howlin' Mad") Smith, USMC, Ret'd., of La Jolla, Calif., in 1946.

SERVICE SOCIAL NEWS

NEW OFFICERS. Fort Bragg's Officers' Wives Club's newly elected leaders and the retiring leaders pose for their picture following their recent election. They are (front row, left to right) Mrs. D. P. Schorr and Mrs. W. N. Gillmore (retiring 1st Vice Pres. and Pres.), Mrs. H. W. C. Shelton and Mrs. F. C. Paul (newly elected Pres. and 1st Vice Pres.); Back row (left to right) Mrs. C. E. McAfee, Mrs. H. L. Kinne, Jr., Mrs. J. Garnett (retiring) and Mrs. J. F. Wells, Mrs. R. W. Beyer and Mrs. P. B. Watson (newly elected).

of Staff designate and Mrs. Nathan F. Twining and Mr. and Mrs. George M. Morris.

Brownes to Leave for Hawaii—

Col. Allan R. Browne, JAGC, USA, is leaving soon for his new assignment at USARPAC, whose headquarters are in Hawaii. Mrs. Browne and their daughter, Miss Carol Browne, who has recently been graduated from Bernard College, Columbia University, will accompany him.

Honor Gen. & Mrs. Maxwell—

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. A. R. Maxwell were honor guests of Col. and Mrs. Frederic H. Miller at a dinner party Tuesday evening, a celebration of General Maxwell's birthday, (which actually fell the week before but General Maxwell was at West Point for the reunion of his class).

Col. & Mrs. Voorhees to Norfolk—
Col. and Mrs. Fred T. Voorhees are leaving Washington in June for Norfolk, Va., where he will be commanding officer of the Port of Embarkation at Hampton Roads.

They are looking forward to a visit of their son, Ted, hoping he will get leave from Stewart Air Force Base at Newburgh, N. Y., for a visit before their departure.

Mrs. Voorhees was hostess Tuesday at a picnic luncheon, her guests mostly from the Officers' Wives Club of the Executive Board of Transportation.

Gralings in D. C.—

Col. and Mrs. Francis J. Graling have come to Washington from four years duty in Canada, where he was U. S. Military Attache in Ottawa. They are at the Westchester, he being on duty with the Permanent Joint Board on Defense-Canada-United States.

They recently visited with their son, Lt. Thomas Robert Graling, stationed at the Naval Air Station at Hutchinson, Kans. Visiting them now is their daughter, Mrs. Fergus MacLaren from Ottawa, while her husband is on a forestry survey in the Canadian north woods.

Institute Honors Mrs. Wilder—

Mrs. Helenor Campbell Wilder, Chief of the Ophthalmic Pathology Section of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, was recently accepted as a full fledged member of the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists. An interesting feature of Mrs. Wilder's acceptance into the Association is the fact that she is not a medical doctor, and this represents the first time in the history of the organization that such a situation has occurred.

Mrs. Wilder was recently honored as Woman of the Year for Science by the Women's National Press Club in Washington, when President Eisenhower presented this award to her.

JAGC Wives' Luncheon—

The wives of the officers of The Judge Advocate General's Corps of the Army will hold their last luncheon of the season on 2 June at 12 noon at the Army Navy Country Club.

Spring and Summer travel fashions, displayed by the Kann Store of Virginia, will be the program motif. An additional program highlight will feature the TWA Travel Adviser who will demonstrate solutions to travel packing problems.

Cadet Koch Honor Graduate—

Lt. Col. Joseph W. Koch, USAF-Ret. and Mrs. Koch of 7403 Three Chopt Road, Richmond, Va., accompanied by their daughter, Sally, are spending the weekend in Staunton, Va., where they will attend the graduation of their son, Cadet Joseph W. Koch, Jr., from Staunton Military Academy on 31 May. Cadet Koch will graduate with honors. He has passed the entrance examinations for West Point and Annapolis and was awarded a scholarship by Virginia Military Institute.

Gen. & Mrs. Tychsen's Party—

The Director of the Staff of the Inter-American Defense Board, Brig. Gen. Andrew C. Tychsen and Mrs. Tychsen were hosts at a cocktail-buffet on Friday, 22 May, at the Board headquarters for its members.

In the receiving line with Gen. and Mrs. Tychsen were the Vice Director of the Staff, Col. Eliodoro Murillo Cardenas, Bolivian Army, and Senora de Murillo. Guests present included the Ambassador of Colombia and Senora de Restrepo, the Venezuelan Ambassador to the Organization of American States and Senora de Lépervanche, and the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. John Cabot.

Among the guests from the Armed Forces of the United States were: Lt. Gen. Howard A. Craig, USAF, Chairman of the IADB, and Mrs. Craig; Maj. Gen.

Robert L. Walsh, USAF-Retd., Past Chairman of the IADB, and Mrs. Walsh; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. R. C. Partridge, USA; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Kelly Parsons, USA-Retd.; Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Ryan, USA, Deputy Chief of Chaplains; Col. John J. Albright, USA-Retd.; Col. and Mrs. Wm. J. Blythe, USA; Col. and Mrs. Hugh Cort, USA; Col. and Mrs. Francis M. Pitts, USA; Col. and Mrs. John F. Greco, USA; Col. and Mrs. Wm. B. Kunzig, USA; Col. and Mrs. J. W. Lufrio, USA-Retd.; Col. and Mrs. Wm. F. Rehm, USA; Col. and Mrs. Walter Rose, USA-Retd., and Col. and Mrs. Claude E. Stadtmann, USA-Retd.

Weddings and Engagements

MRS. Shikery Baddour of Goldsboro, N. C., announces the engagement of her daughter, Mary Margaret, to Maj. William L. Walker, USA, of Ft. Bragg, N. C., and Tarentum, Pa., son of Mrs. Clarence B. Walker, and the late Mr. Walker. Miss Baddour is the daughter of Mrs. Baddour and the late Mr. Baddour. A summer wedding is planned.

Miss Baddour is secretary to Maj. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, CG, Ft. Bragg and XVIII Airborne Corps. She has held this position since 1947, acting as secretary of General John R. Hodge, Lt. Gen. John W. Leonard and Lt. Gen. S. Leroy Irwin. She received her education at St. Mary's school in Goldsboro, the Goldsboro High School and the Women's College of the University of North Carolina.

Major Walker is assigned as Chemical Officer of the XVIII Airborne Corps. He served with the 11th Airborne Division during World War II. Major Walker attended Maryville College in Tennessee and the University of Pittsburgh prior to entry into the service.

CASE-NEWMAN—Miss De Lores Mae Newman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Harvey Newman of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Capt. Robert H. Case, son of Col. and Mrs. Robert A. Case, Pine Grove Farm, Cobb Island, Md., were married on 17 April at the First Methodist Church, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Mrs. Case is presently supervising teacher of Physical Education at Kent State University School. She is a graduate of Coe College in Cedar Rapids and received her Master of Arts degree from University of Iowa.

Captain Case attended Sullivan's Preparatory School and was graduated from U. S. Military Academy in the class of 1946. He is now associate professor in the R.O.T.C. training program at Kent State University. The couple are now at home at 237 E. Main Street, Kent, Ohio, but after 6 June will be at Ft. Meade, Md. for the summer months.

ROTH-MOLITOR—An impressive wedding ceremony was solemnized at Ferris Barracks Chapel, Erlangen, Germany, on 15 May when Joan Michael Molitor became the bride of 1st Lt. Raymond E. Roth.

The bride, who was given in marriage

NURSE SCHOLARSHIP

■ BATTLE CREEK, MICH. Army nurses realize the acute need for more nurses in both military and civilian life. The nurse corps at Percy Jones Army Hospital here is doing something about it.

A hill-billy party was given 21 May to help raise money to provide a scholarship fund to send one or more local girls through nurses' training.

As far as the women here know, theirs is the only group on a military post to carry out such a project. It began several months ago, sparked by Lt. Col. Jeanette Blech, chief nurse, and with the hearty approval of the hospital commander, Col. Norman H. Wiley.

■ PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF. The historic Anza Room at the Officers' Club was the setting for the Armed Forces Day tea in honor of the 11th Anniversary of the Women's Army Corps.

Maj. Harriet N. Moses, Sixth Army WAC Staff Advisor was hostess for the afternoon. She was assisted by Mrs. Paul Steele, Mrs. Malcolm F. Gilchrist, Jr., Mrs. George W. Sliney, Mrs. Sanford J. Goodman and WAC majors, Lane Carlson, Mary Frances Farrell, Margot Reis and Sarah H. Todd.

At the occasion of this meeting, Gayle Meta Dover, 13-year-old daughter of Maj. and Mrs. G. J. Dover, received a medal from Mr. A. M. Galvin for outstanding scholastic work.

■ AUGUSTA ARSENAL, GA. The annual meeting of the Officers' Mess was held 18 May. The following were elected to serve as the Board of Governors for the ensuing year: Lt. Col. Walter E. Freeman, Maj. John L. Townsend, Capt. Reese E. Edwards, Capt. Henry L. Watson and Mr. Luther H. Krewson.

Col. W. H. Dawson, Jr., Commanding Officer, presented $862 to officers of the local unit of the American Cancer Society, representing Augusta Arsenal contributions in the 1953 Cancer Control Campaign. A total of 843 officers, enlisted men and civilians contributed in this fund-raising campaign.

■ FT. BRAGG, N. C. Col. George M. Jones, XVIII Airborne Corps, Chief of Staff has been reassigned to the Far East Command.

He is a Master Parachutist and a graduate of the class of 1935 at the U. S. Military Academy. The 32d officer of the entire Army to be assigned to parachute duty, Colonel Jones became a parachutist before the Army officially opened the school.

When World War II started he was commanding a unit of the 501st Parachute Infantry Battalion in Panama, and he left Panama as battalion commander in 1942 (the 501st was integrated with the 503d) and the Colonel accompanied this unit to Queensland, Australia, and six major combat operations.

He took command of the 2d Battalion to lead the Markham Vail-Lee Operation in 1943. It was the first Airborne effort of the war that saw troops land directly on invaded Drop Zones. On 16 Feb., 1945, the invasion of Corregidor, led and planned by Colonel Jones, started.

At the close of the war Colonel Jones was assigned as Director of Training, Airborne School, Ft. Benning, Ga. He attended the National War College, 1949-50.

Col. Stanley R. Larsen, former regimental commander of the 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment of the 82d Airborne Division, and XVIII Airborne Corps Deputy Chief of Staff, will replace Colonel Jones as Chief of Staff.

Among the guests attending were Mrs. John M. Welkert, Mrs. Raymond S. McLain and Mrs. Harold R. Bull, all of whom formerly resided at Ft. Lesley J. McNair. Mrs. Harold R. Jackson's guests included her cousin, Mrs. Thomas, and Mrs. J. D. Moss, wife of Colonel Moss, who will succeed Colonel Jackson as Post Commander in July. The group was honored to have Mrs. Lesley J. McNair presiding at the coffee table. Following the luncheon, Mrs. H. B. Powell demonstrated the Oriental sculpture of Bon-Kel, and showed some of her own work in it, depicting the seasons of the year.

Mrs. Burr was hostess recently, at a morning coffee, at her quarters, honoring Mesdames W. M. Burgess, C. T. Hickman, E. C. Mattie and G. E. Abbott, all of whom are leaving the Post.

The clothing drive for the Korean people received a splendid response at Ft. Lesley J. McNair, the result totaling 1400 pounds of clothes collected.

■ WITH THE 1ST CAVALRY DIVISION, HOKKAIDO, JAPAN. Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph P. Cleland, recently appointed commanding general of the 1st Cavalry, arrived by air (14 May) and was welcomed by members of the general staff and their wives.

Mrs. Cleland departed, Washington, D. C., by Pan American Airlines and arrived 9 May in Tokyo, where the couple spent four days at the Fujiwara Hotel before coming to Hokkaido. They were last together in May, 1952, when General Cleland departed for Korea and assignment with the 40th Infantry Division.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Ralph C. Cooper, Division Artillery Commander, presented Mrs. Cleland with a bouquet upon arrival at Chitose and entertained them at their home before their departure by air for Camp Crawford. dergone surgery early in May.
Born in Williams Mills, N. C., 23 Oct. 1871, the former head of the Army chaplaincy attended Wake Forest College, N. C., where he received his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1893 and his Master of Arts degree in 1894. He was awarded his Bachelor of Divinity degree at the University of Chicago in 1900.

A minister of the Northern Baptist Convention, he served the civilian parishes of the Immanuel Baptist Church in Chicago and the First Baptist Church in Olathe, Kans., prior to his appointment to the chaplaincy on 1 April 1902, when he was assigned to Ft. Leavenworth, Kans. During WW I he served in France with the Artillery.

Chaplain Yates served in the War Plans Division of the General Staff in 1919 as Assistant to the Officer in charge of Moral Training, and the following year was assigned to the newly established Office Chief of Chaplains as Executive Officer.

Following assignments at Ft. Myer, Va., Washington Barracks, D. C., Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., and a second tour as Executive Officer in the Office Chief of Chaplains, Chaplain Yates assumed duties as head of the Army chaplaincy with the rank of colonel on 23 Dec. 1929. He was the third man to head the chaplaincy as Chief of Chaplains in the history of the Army. His tour of duty as Chief ended 22 Dec. 1933.

Chaplain Yates lived at 3803 Huntington Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. Following his retirement for age, 31 Oct. 1935, after serving more than 33 years with the Army, he devoted considerable time to his hobby of painting. In addition to a self portrait, he presented oil paintings of Chaplain Luther D. Miller and Roy H. Parker to the Office Chief of Chaplains upon their retirement as Chief of Chaplains.

Chaplain Yates was awarded the Purple Heart, World War I Victory Ribbon and a silver medal from the French Government for his work with the French Public Health Service. Wake Forest College awarded him a Doctor of Divinity degree in 1930.

Col. Robert Brooks Ennis, USA-Ret.

Concerning the death 2 May in Los Angeles of Col. Robert Brooks Ennis, USA-Ret., a correspondent writes:

"Bob Ennis a long time ago met another young soldier, Dwight Eisenhower, and a lasting friendship was formed. Then in the North African campaign in World War II, Ennis, commanding a tank force under Eisenhower, suffered battle wounds which incapacitated him for long months. Returning to active duty he was sent to China. The war over, Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, recommended Ennis to the United Nations, then in need of an administrator in China.

"Ennis, in China again, saw the Communists take over. Then, the China mainland lost, he returned to the United States and during the past year has led a determined and uncompromising battle against Communism, serving as Los Angeles Chairman for the American Bureau for Medical Aid to Free China, while Eisenhower battles for the same principles on an international scale.

"Ennis, in the best American tradition, fulfilled a speaking engagement and radio broadcast at the Los Angeles Breakfast Club only a few hours after suffering a severe heart attack which two days later ended his devoted career.

"Among the tributes, which Bob Ennis would have appreciated but could not live to read, were those from President and Mrs. Eisenhower; President and Madame Chiang Kai-shek; Dr. Howard C. Naffziger, President of the American Surgical Association;

Hon. Charles Edison, former Secretary of the Navy and former governor of New Jersey; Dr. Hu Shih, of Princeton University and former ambassador to the United States from China; Bishop Herbert Welch; K. C. Wu, former governor of Formosa; Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer; General Charles F. Craig; Morrie Ryskind; Dr. Frank Meloney of Columbia University; General Herbert Perrin; Dr. B. A. Garside, executive director of ABMAC; Consul General Y. S. Kiang; Dr. P. H. Ho, China Representative of the International Bank; Consul General F. H. Chang, of New York; Ambassador T. F. Tsiang, China Representative to the United Nations, and numerous fellow-officers and diplomats throughout the United States, Europe and China."

U. S. Coast Guard

PRESIDENT Eisenhower this week nominated two Coast Guard officers, Frank T. Kenner and Henry C. Perkins, for promotion to the permanent rank of Rear Admiral.

Captain Kenner, 49, was graduated from the U. S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., in 1922. He was commander of the Coast Guard-Army Manning Detachment in New Guinea and the Philippines from June 1944 to April 1945, when he was ordered to Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington, D. C., for duty as Chief, Program Planning Division.

Captain Kenner in the reorganization of Headquarters in May 1951 was designated Chief, Liaison Division, and also serves as president of the panel for the Board of Review, Discharges and Dismissals, and is the Coast Guard representative on the joint Army-Navy-Air Force staff for the Military District of Washington and Potomac River Command Area.

Captain Perkins, 48, was graduated from New London in 1924. During the war he commanded the Cutter Taney and the Leonard Wood (APA-12).

Returning to the continental United States in December 1945, Captain Perkins served as district personnel officer, 11th Coast Guard District, Long Beach, Calif., until February 1947, when he was transferred to Seoul, Korea, for duty with the U. S. Military Government. In July 1948 he was designated Chief of Staff, 12th Coast Guard District, San Francisco, with additional duty, from December of that year as Deputy Area Commander, Western Area. He is presently serving in that capacity.

In March 1953 he was ordered to the 2d Coast Guard District, St. Louis, Mo., where he expects to assume duty as District Commander the latter part of July.

Dependent Care Hope

The Coast Guard is hopeful that testimony given this week to the Defense Department Dependent Care Commission will result in a recommendation by the Commission that present discrimination against Coast Guard families be eliminated. Coast Guard families, as has been reported frequently in news stories and editorials in THE JOURNAL, cannot be treated at medical facilities of the Army, Navy and Air Force, even though bed spaces may be available.

These Services have no authority for the treatment of Coast Guard dependents.

Public Health Service hospitals are widely scattered and in many cases not able to provide medical services for wives and children of Coast Guard personnel.

The Dependent Care Commission may recommend, on the basis of data presented this week, that Coast Guard dependents be treated at medical facilities of the Army, Navy and Air Force on a "space available" basis.

Douglas AD-4 Sets Record

A Navy Douglas AD Skyraider is believed to have set a new world record for loads carried by a single-engine aircraft.

The big attack bomber (Model AD-4), carrying a useful load of 14,941 pounds, winged its way into the sky over the Naval Air Station at Dallas, Tex., on 21 May, before members of the Aviation Writer's Association who were holding their annual convention in the Texas city.

Mounted with three 2,000-pound bombs, six 250-pound bombs and six 500-pounders, the Skyraider carried a total bombload of over 10,500 pounds. The full useful load of 14,941 pounds included armament, pilot and flight gear, fuel and oil.

The load was said to be greater than any single-engine plane had ever carried before and greater than some two-engine and four-engine planes have flown in the past.

New Navy Day Fighter

The Navy Bureau of Aeronautics announced 21 May that Chance Vought Aircraft Division of United Aircraft Corporation had won a design competition for a new Navy Day fighter.

The announcement was made by Capt. C. M. Jett, USN, Bureau of Aeronautics Representative at Dallas, Tex., to more than 200 members of the Aviation Writers Association, gathered there for their annual convention.

The design chosen was considered by the Navy fighter design and evaluation experts to be the best suited for Navy requirements from designs submitted by eight aircraft manufacturers.

Chance Vought currently is producing the F7U-3 Cutlass fighter for the Navy and the guided missile Regulus. The company also recently received a contract for the A2U-1, an attack version of the Cutlass.

Korean Service Medal

The Commandant has received copies of several letters requesting COMNAVFE to authorize the Korean Service Medal for Coast Guard units. No authority exists for COMNAVFE to award this medal to CG units. Executive Order 10429 of 17 January 1953, amended Executive Order 10179 of 8 Nov. 1950, and authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to prescribe regulations for the award of the Korean Service Medal to Coast Guard personnel. Such regulations have been approved by the Secretary and will be issued in an amendment to the Personnel Manual in the near future. Commanding Officers should discontinue submitting requests to COMNAVFE for authorization of this medal.

New PX Deputy for S. F.

Maj. Harold F. Bare, USAF, has been appointed Deputy to the San Francisco Regional Officer of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, it is announced by Maj. Gen. Edward H. White, USAF, Chief of the PX system.

In his new position, Major Bare will assist in supervising the operations of Army and Air Force exchanges throughout eight western states.

Prior to his present assignment, Major Bare had been staff exchange officer for the headquarters of the Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Nebr. His Service experience also includes 31 months overseas with the 8th Air Force during World War II where he served as post exchange officer, company commander, and Quartermaster and Executive Officer. For three years after the war he was stationed at Andrews Air Force Base in Washington, D. C., as exchange officer.

Corps Finance Officer

Lt. Col. Nich A. Luscombe recently assumed the duties of finance officer for the XVIII Airborne Corps, Ft. Bragg, N. C. Previously, he was in the Finance Office of the United States Army C.I.C. Center at Ft. Holabird, Md.

Army Assist. Sec'y. Delivers Address Which Cites Need For Action On Service Attractiveness and that we encourage all our citizens to look upon our Army, as a manifestation of our people in action. It can be no better than we are. If it suffers from improper leadership, or inadequate materiel, it suffers because of the actions in which we have had a very considerable part. If it is slurred, we are slurred. If it is abused, we are being abused. Simply stated, your Army is a reflection of you. In a democracy there can be no other approach. Nothing affects the morale of our soldiers more than a feeling in the citizenry that the Army and the uniform are not held in esteem. Any action by any of us which leads to that conclusion strikes at morale and thus at efficiency. Such an approach should not inhibit healthy criticism which, in a democracy, is natural, is expected, and is necessary. However, there is a very definite line between healthy, intelligent criticism and castigation of those who, for want of a better term, we call the "brass." Now with this idea of a proper framework between the citizenry and the Army, let me give you my sensing of what troubles the Services today and why we are losing the indispensable nucleus.

Attractiveness of Services

What attracts a career soldier? What makes him stay in the Army at a relatively small pay for a lifetime? What induces this action, an attraction which we must not lose?

To me, the problem has two facets which are mutually intertwined and which cannot be discussed separately. The first of these is the idea of service—service to the community and to the Nation. It is the concept of duty and honor and country. It is the belief that in the hour of stress the country will find among its soldier-citizens those who are most capable of defending it. It is the hope for a future which will steadily bring, with maturity of ability, increased responsibility, and with it, increased authority. It is these, coupled with an expectation of sufficient increase in tangible benefits as life goes on, so that the individual will be able to live a modest life and care properly for the family which he, as an American citizen, will raise.

This, then, is the second of these two facets. It has been said that "glory is the soldier's pay." The Hook Commission, in 1948, commented that in the past the "rewards of our military leaders have been modest pay, security, and the affection and respect of the people." What then has happened of late to the modest rewards which a career soldier has had every just right to expect from long and faithful service?

Reduction in Rewards

In the opinion of some young officers I have talked to, the career soldier has seen a steady and almost inexorable trend toward a reduction in his reward for staying in the service. He has seen manifestations in the Congress of a tendency to cut his real remuneration almost every time the subject has been presented. He has seen his civilian counterparts in the Government receive a 10-per cent pay raise while he took the best he could get, a 5½-per cent increase. He has seen Congress pass legislation which inhibited or prevented his retirement at the end of 30 years of service. He has seen a gradual

Gen. Stone Named Pers. Planning Deputy at Hdqs.

Brig. Gen. William S. Stone, USAF, presently chief of the Plans Division for U. S. Air Forces Europe, will report to USAF Headquarters in July to become deputy director of personnel planning.

General Stone has been in Germany since August 1951, first as assistant chief of the USAFE Plans Division and its chief since September 1952.

A graduate of the U. S. Military Academy in 1934, General Stone, who is 43, was chief of staff of the Air Weather Service prior to his appointment as an associate professor in the Department of Social Sciences at West Point in January 1947. He attended the National War College from August 1950 to July 1951, prior to his assignment to USAFE.

Air Transport P. R. Advisor

James S. Cobb, VP Public Relations of Delta Air Lines, was elected Chairman on the Public Relations Advisory Committee of the Air Transport Association, at the semi-annual meeting held in Dallas during the Aviation Writers Association Convention.

Willis Player, VP Public Relations of Northwest Airlines, was elected Vice Chairman, a newly created office.

curtailment of many of the small privileges which in the past caused his small salary to go very much further. He has seen non-wage benefits such as commissary, post exchange, and medical care of dependents diminish in true worth almost to the vanishing point. All this has occurred at a time when private industry was proceeding on exactly the opposite approach to the problem of attracting and holding career personnel. He has read derogatory statements in the public press and in the Congressional Record concerning himself and his leaders; he has added all this together in his mind, both he and those whom we are trying to attract to the Army, and has come to the conclusion that his country doesn't really want him very much.

Gentlemen, regardless of the degree of truth in this appraisal, this is not a pretty situation. It is enough that these thoughts are being believed. Were it happening to my concern while I was in charge, I don't think I would remain in my position very long after these facts had been brought to the attention of the board of directors.

Now what can we do, and what can the citizenry of this Nation do, to change this? What can we do to hold those we have and make sure that in the future we will have those whom we need?

Career Patterns

The answer is simple to state, but in practice it will be somewhat difficult to attain. First, we must, within the Army, implement our career patterns so as to give recognition where recognition is due, and to provide that each man will know that the limit of his attainment in the service of his choice is determined only by his individual competence and his hard work. And, secondly, we must insure that the individual who has this concept of service in mind will receive sufficient reward for his toil so that he will not be tempted to leave the uniform for the greater monetary rewards of American business. Thirdly, we must insure that, once we have succeeded in attracting the men of our choice as a career soldier, we will not, in midstream, change the conditions of our contract. In other words, we must not break faith; we must uphold our share of the bargain. Because, it is perfectly natural and to be expected, that the Army will always be in friendly competition with other employers for the services of capable men.

In closing, I want you to understand that I regard this problem as one of the most basic which the services have to face and one whose importance I do not believe can be overstated. Unless it is solved, in a democratic way, there may be little hope that we will have in the future the type of leaders we have had in our lifetime—the Marshalls, the Eisenhower, the Pattons, the Somervells, the Clays, and the Collins—men who were content to stay long years in low grades because they saw the need in the future. I ask each of you, in your daily lives, in your contacts with our military and civilian leaders, both in Government and in the community, to lend us your support in the endeavor. It is up to us to provide the vision so that the future will always be there for our young men now in service and those who will join them in years to come.

Gen. Barcus To ATRC, Shift Other Air Generals

The Air Force announced this week that Lt. Gen. Glenn O. Barcus will return from command of the Fifth Air Force in Korea to become vice commander of the Air Training Command at Scott AFB, Ill., replacing Maj. Gen. Kenneth P. McNaughton.

General McNaughton will become vice commander of Far East Air Forces, succeeding Maj. Gen. Samuel R. Brentnall. In other changes, it was announced that Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner, vice commander of the Air Materiel Command at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, will become deputy commander of U. S. Air Forces, Europe, replacing Maj. Gen. Truman H. Landon.

Army Navy Air Force Journal 1207

30 May 1953

General Tunner will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. William McKee, who has been Assistant Vice Chief of Staff at USAF Headquarters.

New assignments were not announced for Generals Brentnall and Landon.
